Very Cheap Dollar Souls Will Be Saved Germany's Phone Call $500,000,000 Saved

—By Arthur Brisbane—

The financial doctors report that our poor American dollar yesterday, all over Europe, was "sinking rapidly." It is now lower in value than it has been in 50 years. Franc, pound sterling, Spanish peseta, etc., went up as the dollar went down.

While the United States lacks the good effects that would follow reasonable inflation, the outside world runs away from our money. The country might as well make up its mind to do something in the way of "reflation." When Congress meets, it probably will do something, since an overwhelming majority of the congressmen favor what they inaccurately call "inflation."

As our dollar goes down, gold goes up. England is buying it, paying a high premium. American producers of gold hope they will be permitted to sell their product wherever they please, at the world's market price. Since Uncle Sam is off the gold basis, has billions of gold stored up, why should he hamper the man who has gold and wants to sell it?

Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, who lives to save souls, is in New York, where many souls need saving.

When "Ben Hur" was revived in New York years ago, Billy Sunday, writing about it, said: "There are more lepers on Broadway than there ever were in the Holy Land."

Mrs. Semple McPherson Hutton is looking for these lepers and will wash them, spiritually, whiter than snow.

She requested, and obtained, two little love birds to decorate her hotel bedroom. Mr. Hutton, who is "separated," will think about that, with tears in his eyes, let us hope.

Miss Texas Guinan, who has followed other paths, is now preparing a "Greenwich tour in the sticks." She intends to start saving souls also, just as soon as she can afford it. And when she stops saving souls, she will cultivate a little back garden and show people how to be happy in a simple way.

She should be a good revivalist because she could tell a wicked audience just what it had been doing, and how near hell is to bright lights. There is a lot in the old saying:

"The greater the sinner, the greater the saint."

Courtland Smith, of New York, back from a trip through various countries of Europe, gives you this interesting information about the new method of telephoning in Germany. A solemn German enters a telephone booth, begins the conversation: "Heil Hitler." "Heil Hitler," and after this talk remarks to the man at the other end again: "Heil Hitler," and goes his way.

Germans, the young especially, are described as wildly enthusiastic about Hitler, more so even than the Italians were after their dictator's first rise to power.

The question is, will Hitler turn out to be another Mussolini, or another Rienzi, who also rose to supreme power and came to an abrupt end. Look him up in your history for the facts, not in Wagner's opera about him.

Postmaster-General James A. Farley, as busy a man as ever worked for this country, announces that five hundred million dollars have been cut from the nation's expenses since July 1, in comparison with the same figure a year ago.

That is an interesting figure, when you remember that not very long ago, when Tom Reed was Speaker of the House, the government of the United States spent only five hundred million dollars in a year for its army, navy and everything else. Now New York City spends more than that.

Col. Lindbergh, born in America, has visited the birthplace of his father in Sweden. His father was a good American citizen, a member of Congress. You know what Lindbergh is, what he has done for this country's reputation.

Under our present, viciously harmful immigration laws, Lindbergh's father could not have come to the United States, and there would not have been any Col. Lindbergh here.

Shroud Discarded, but New Order Hits Jews, Uses the Old Baits

"Silver Shirts of Massachusetts" is the name of the new organization, according to its publicity, but many of the old Klan shibboleths are there, including the appeals to the "Protestant Christians of America," the "People of the South," and the "Workers of America."

NEW ORDER, OLD AIMS

There are also, in the new organization's announcements, the old attacks on the Jews, veiled hints about "a foreign threat to our national sovereignty" and the same familiar story about the United States having been "sold out to the Reds."

And one Arthur Ajax declares he is the Provost State Commandant for Massachusetts, although admitting he lives in Asheville, N. C.

He does not, apparently, resent intimations linking his organization with the old Ku Klux Klan. In fact, he says:

"The power of the Klan was crippled from within due to the fact that the very element that the Klan was trying to put into place succeeded in getting a goodly number of its own people in the hooded ranks. That is why justly enraged Klansmen have been flocking to our banners. Our outfit is profiting from their experience and has adopted the time-tested ruling that not a single member of the race (sic) shall get into the ranks."

BARE AMALGAMATIONS

Ajax, whose stationery bears the signature of William Dudley Pelley, national commander, then goes on to charge some amazing plots against the government.

"President Roosevelt," he says, "is only the tool of Bernard Baruch, who is seeking to establish a peasant class in this country.

"America, for the past 30 years, has been ruled by a coterie of 'silents' who have operated behind Gentile names and Gentile puppets," he asserts.

The American Supreme court, has been invaded by Brandeis and Cardozo, both of that alleged element which has also, Ajax says, managed to manipulate the Federal Reserve Bank as a pawn on the chess board of Kuhn, Loeb and Co., whose chief conception is one Otto Kahn, a German Jew who has never been naturalized in this country. This international banker has robbed America of 300 billion dollars in currency, bullion and international credit."

There's much more, but these statements are a fair sample of the "message" now being sent into this state.

ACCUSED OF ATTACK ON OTHER GIRL

Alleged identification of Harry P. Cahill, 45, sought in the strangle slaying of 10-year-old Peggy McCarthy, as a girl attacker in Lawrence last July, came as another surprise development today in the hunt for the missing man.

The identification of Cahill, according to Police Chief Thomas Damery of Somerville, was made by a 10-year-old South Lawrence girl through photographs, as search for Cahill moved toward the New Hampshire-Canadian border.

In belief that Cahill may have fled in Montreal, Dist.-Atty. Warren L. Bishop today telegraphed Montreal police a description and asked that a search be made there for the missing man.

Chief Damery said that he, with state detectives and Lawrence police inspectors, had questioned the girl closely and had shown her photographs and that he is satisfied Cahill was her alleged attacker.

The girl said that on July 26 she, with two other young girls and a boy, had been picking blueberries in a pasture near the White Pogs bridge when the man she now declares was Cahill stepped out from behind some bushes.

TELLS OF ATTACK

This man, she said, seized her, ordered her companions to go home and then attacked her. The girl went home to Stati st. and told her mother, and a police physician examined the child and verified the attack.

Chief Damery, with State Detectives Joseph Ferrari and Edward Sherlock and Inspectors Patrick Morrissey and John Rollon of Lawrence, quizzed the girl, but she remained firm in her identification.

Lawrence is Cahill's home town, although of late years he has been living in Somerville. A girl cousin

America, Japan and Peace in the Pacific

On August 30th the Hearst Newspapers published a signed editorial by William Randolph Hearst, entitled "Only Preparedness Will Prevent War" and calling attention to Japan's "permanent occupancy" of mid-Pacific islands which, from a "strategic wedge" between Hawaii and the Philippines, capable of being fortified into naval bases.

Mr. Hearst's editorial was immediately republished in full in Japan, where it aroused "much comment, as well as considerable doubt," in the words of Yasuo Fuwa, New York correspondent of the Japanese newspaper Yomiuri Shimbun.

Mr. Fuwa, on behalf of his newspaper, asked Mr. Hearst for a further statement, which was printed yesterday in Japan by the Yomiuri Shimbun. Following is its complete text.

Los Angeles, Sept. 15, 1933.

Mr. Yasuo Fuwa,
Correspondent Yomiuri Shimbun,

DEAR SIR:

I think my article speaks for itself and needs no special explanations. It is not hostile to Japan. It is, I hope, patriotically considerate of the United States—my country. I am an American—nothing else.

However, I can be that and still think that Japan is a great, progressive, modern nation, performing a valuable work in the world in modernizing the backward countries which come within its influence.

Progress is imperative. It is apparently the will of God that the world shall advance.

Countries which will not make progress must have progress made for them.

There is no use sympathizing with decadent nations which refuse to advance.

Let the progressive peoples of the world, and particularly the American people, reserve their sympathy and encouragement for the nations which are leading the march of progress.

Atty. L. A. Mayberry Gets Hearing In Jury Fixing

Disbarment proceedings against Lowell A. Mayberry, prominent Boston attorney and son of an even more prominent attorney, George L. Mayberry, charging jury fixing, started in Supreme Court today.

They consisted of a hearing granted by Judge Henry T. Lummus on the merits of a report by Dunbar F. Carpenter, special commissioner appointed by the Supreme Court to investigate charges of fraudulent activities by lawyers.

John L. Hall of Choate, Hall and Stewart appeared for Mayberry.

It was the second case of alleged jury fixing on the part of an attorney, brought by Carpenter, the first being that of Atty. Wilfred R. Keenan, which was taken under advisement last spring by Judge Charles H. Donahue.

Atty. Mayberry was born in Waltham May 28, 1896, and attended the Waltham schools and Phillips Andover Academy. He was graduated from Boston University Law School in the class of 1917, was admitted to the bar the same year, and began the practice of law as an associate of his father. His home is in Waban.

COAKLEY SET TO GET INTO MAYORALTY SCRAMBLE

"If He Runs, He'll Go In to Win," Says His Son, Gail

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Daniel H. Coakley, only Democratic member of the Governor's Council, is, according to his close friends, about to take the plunge into the mad scramble for mayor.

Some said that "Dan" had already made up his mind, but his son, Gail, denied this with the statement that his father was very favorably inclined only, so far.

"Of course, if he goes in, he'll go in to win," young Coakley declared.

The effect the entrance of the Brighton man will have on the constantly shifting mayoralty picture, many think, will be to check the spurt that the candidacy of Dist. Atty. William J. Foley has made since the entrance of Senator Henry Parkman into the race.

NICHOLS WEAKENED

The consensus of opinion among the political deputies is that for the moment at least Parkman's announcement put Nichols' candidacy under a decided blanket.

It is further held by the students of the game that Nichols' chances can be rebuilt only through the entrance of more Democrats. By this strategy the strength of the individual Democratic candidates could be further weakened.

There is one possibility, however, that the politicians fear above anything else, and that is that the taxpayers, disgusted with the situation, may jump over the traces and start a concerted drive for a candidate who they believe will give them the most efficient and honest government.

LOOK FOR SHOWDOWN

There are some of the Democratic leaders that sense this, and efforts will be redoubled by them soon to have a showdown insofar as the candidates within the party are concerned.

The feeling is growing that if Gov. Ely, Sen. Walsh, former Mayor

FEAR REDUCED BUYING WITH STOP-GAP ON BARGAINS

Caution Urged on Johnson; Retailers to Frame Code; Public Advisory Board Against Minimum

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
(Copyright, 1933, by International News Service)

Washington, Sept. 19—A blunt warning, based upon a scientific, economic analysis, that the entire NRA program will be defeated if a policy of price-fixing is adopted, was prepared today for Hugh S. ohnson, administrator, by experts of the research and planning division.

The aggressive attitude of the economists, who were brought into the NRA movement to survey its progress and analyze future trends, promised to bring the entire price-fixing issue to a climax within the next 10 days.

With price fixing permitted under the oil code, but not yet fully exercised; with price maintenance also provided in both the lumber and coal codes, the issue was raised with increasing force in the present negotiations for a retail sales code.

FORBIDS TOO LOW PRICE

Although Johnson has consistently declared he opposed general price-fixing, if it can be avoided, he has approved the inclusion of provisions prohibiting sales below cost or fair market value.

Under the proposed retail code, which has divided retailers, economists and the NRA staff, it is proposed to prohibit sales of goods at less than wholesale cost plus ten per cent. Some exceptions are provided.

The research and planning division which was designed to give Johnson the benefit of experts in the economic field, declares in its report that price-fixing may destroy those who propose it as well as the NRA.

The report holds:

The chief volume of business in the country is done in the retail field, where prosperity begins ends.

If prices are fixed, or if code provisions permit the frequent upward fixing of prices while not permitting downward adjustments to meet diminution of purchasing power, only decrease of sales volume or indefinite inflation can result.

FEAR FO RBUYING POWER

First, if prices are fixed and purchasing power lags, there is no way for the merchant to save himself but he would have to continue to hold surplus stocks.

Second, in such a case the government would resort to progressive currency inflation which would have the effect of temporarily raising purchasing power but would cause a continued increase in prices.

In either case, the economists hold there is danger that purchasing power will lag. This, in turn, would create more unemployment at a time when the NRA is seeking to put millions back to work and increasing their purchasing power.

The consumers' advisory board of the NRA, which has opposed price-fixing in the retail code, was awaiting a call from Johnson.

Deputy Administrator A. D. Whiteside, in charge of the code, was to confer further with Johnson on the code today. Leading retailers of the nation are expected to be called in during the week.

Coal Prices to Go Up on Code October 2

Washington, Sept. 19 (AP)—Now that the code to govern operations of the soft coal industry has been promulgated to take effect Oct. 2, coal operators and NRA officials expect an increase in the retail price of bituminous after that date.

The National Coal Association said today higher prices were inevitable because shorter hours and higher wages called for under the code would bring increased costs of production.

Officials of the association also pointe dto the code's provision prohibiting selling below the cost of production as a factor in the impending increase.

Hugh S. Johnson has said of the coal price:

"I'd stand for it going up as much as $2 a ton, though I do not expect that it will."

SPEEDERS' KIN FACE CHARGES

Possibility that parents of boy speeders may hereafter be charged with neglect was seen today as one boy lay dead and two others faced reform school as a result of racing over Charlestown's "loop-the-loop."

Capt. Harry T. Grace of the Charlestown station was considering summoning into court parents of boy speeders between the ages of 7 and 17, in addition to prosecuting the boys themselves, in an effort to prevent further tragedies.

The dead boy, Harry Haskett, 15, killed by the accidental discharge of a policeman's revolver as the climax to a wild chase, never knew his real mother. He was adopted in England when two hours old by Mrs. Catherine Haskett of Kinnaird st., Cambridge.

His companions were arraigned in juvenile session of Charlestown court and held by Judge Charles H. Sullivan for appearance on Saturday. James Slattery, 15, of Donovan's ct., Charlestown, was charged with larceny of an automobile, unlawful use of the machine, operating so as to endanger, operating without a license, and assault and battery with an automobile on Patrolman Arthur S. Pugsley. It was charged an attempt was made to run down Officer Pugsley, whose gun was discharged when he was knocked from the running board of the car.

George Taylor, 16, of Moulton st., Charlestown, was charged with unlawful use of an automobile and larceny. Both were committed for lack of bail.

EZEKIEL SEES NEED OF MORE U. S. WORKERS

Advisor to Wallace Says Real Aid Is Due Farmers

The possibility that too many of America's workers may be employed in selling and transportation, as compared with production, was suggested in the Boston Conference on Retail Production at the University Club today by Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, economic advisor to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Dr. Ezekiel warned that costs of raw materials must advance more rapidly than retail prices—that otherwise the whole course of recovery might be impeded, or prevented.

"Our major attention," he said, "may be devoted to the long-time problem. Distribution costs have continued to rise over a long term of years. That rise cannot be permitted to continue forever.

FARMERS' INCOME

"Is it necessary that for every ten persons engaged in production one person be engaged in distribution? That is the fundamental problem which the farmers look to transporters, wholesalers, and retailers to answer."

Dr. Ezekiel pointed out that over a long period a large and ever larger share of the nation's expenditures have been absorbed by distribution services, while there was a corresponding reduction in the share which went back to the farm produces of raw materials.

He cited statistics to show how, during the depression, a decline "of possibly one-third in the cash income of consumers, taking the country as a whole, was accompanied by a decline of more than two-thirds in the net income of farmers."

MANY OTHER SPEAKERS.

"These facts are of grave significance to you gentlemen, the distributors of farm products. The farmer challenges you. 'What can you do to restore my share of the consumer's dollar?'"

Among other speakers were: G. Fred Rost, on "Consignment Selling"; Dr. Harlow S. Person, on "Price Control," and Louis Fairchild, on "National Recovery Act in Its Relation to Distribution."

Dean Everett W. Lord, Boston University College of Business Administration, presided. E. H. Cooley, manager Massachusetts Fisheries Assn., had charge of the discussion.

W.R. Hearst Urges U.S. Lead War on Bigots

America must keep the light of freedom bright. She thus will be an example in leading the world out of the era of bigotry and cruelty into which it is now plunging.

William Randolph Hearst made the above declarations today in a special message to the Jews in America on their Rosh Hashonah, or Day of the New Year.

A statement from Mr. Hearst, in observance of the Jewish holiday, was sought by The Jewish Advocate, of Boston.

Mr. Hearst's statement is published prominently today in that newspaper's New Year's Day anniversary editions as follows:—

"I hope this New Year will inaugurate a new era of liberty and enlightenment throughout the world. At present the world seems plunging back into the dark ages of bigotry and cruelty, of prejudice and persecution.

"The duty of America should be to keep our part of the world bright with the light of liberty, cleansed of the black hatreds and evil antagonisms which breed like bats in the dark of ignorance and intolerance.

"Education and understanding will make us a race of brothers living in mutual affection and mutual appreciation.

"Thus may America become an example to the rest of the world, leading it back to the light and showing it not only the moral but the material benefit of tolerance and freedom."

PLANTS TIED UP IN BROCKTON

Brockton, Sept. 19—What the Brotherhood of Shoe Workers claims is an effort to force them into the A. F. of L.-dominated Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, under the protection of the Blue Eagle, today threatened to paralyze Brockton's hoe industry completely.

Six of the city's larger plants failed to open this morning, while only 2000 workers out of a total of more than 6000 were at their benches in the factories that opened.

Brotherhood is very efficiently restraining its membership from going to work," said Chief of Police James F. Morey.

"That is their right. I sent out a number of officers yesterday to factories that requested them, but there was no sign of violence and I am sure there will be none. I shall assign no more men on this kind of duty."

Shoe Manufacturers May Refuse to Sign

Washington, Sept. 19 (AP)—Sources close to the Recovery administration expressed confidence that the merit clause in the proposed code for the boot and shoe industry would be eliminated despite protest by manufacturers.

Removal of the clause from the code was regarded as inevitable in view of President Roosevelt's action in striking from the coal code language interpreting the collective bargaining provisions of the National Recovery Act.

So bitter were some manufacturers at reports the merit clause would not be left in the shoe code they privately said they might refuse to sign it and demand a license instead.

NRA LETTER TO EVERY HOME

The state recovery board and county chairmen will meet today to discuss final plans for carrying out the general NRA program with particular attention to the national buying campaign.

Another important meeting today will be that of the consumer's committee. Plans will be completed for the sending of a letter to every home in the state asking for support of the consumer drive which gets under way tomorrow.

At the state board meeting reports received from committee and department heads on the progress of the campaign thus far will be discussed.

Also scheduled for discussion is the county and local organization work. This is rapidly nearing completion and officials said today they expected a chairman would be appointed and accepted in every city and town.

The first meeting of the Junior NRA committee of the State recovery board was held yesterday after Herbert C. Parsons had accepted the appointment as chairman of that group.

Other executives who accepted the appointments on the committee are: Mrs. Eva White, vice-chairman; Dr. Payson Smith, chairman of public schools group; Rev. Richard Quinlan, chairman of parochial schools group; Miss Euphemia McClintock, chairman of private schools group, and Richard K. Conant, chairman of all other groups.

50,000 Parade for NRA in Syracuse

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 19 (U8)—Syracuse last night rallied to President Roosevelt's NRA program with the greatest parade ever staged in the city. More than 50,000 workers, employers and city officials were in line.

Banners and signs calling upon the patriotic to "buy now" were featured. Bands, floats and many jobless men and women who have found employment and received purchasing power through the NRA, gave enthusiastic proof that Syracuse is behind the President's policy 100 per cent.

TROOPS RUSHED TO QUELL NEW CUBA REVOLT

Hernandez Leads His Men Toward Havana as Grau Hangs On

Havana, Sept. 19 (AP)—Confronted by incipient civil war, the new Cuban government today dispatched a tranload of troops and students to Camaguey province, where Capt. uanJ Blas Hernandez known as the "Cuban Sandina," has taken the field.

Captain Blas conducted a long guerilla warfare against the deposed president, Gerardo Machado. Recently he spent several weeks in Havana conferring with Gen. Carlos Mendieta, one of the principal leaders of the opposition to the present government.

The insurgent captain, who got his nickname because of the similarity of his anti-Machado campaign to that waged for years by Augustino Sandino in Nicaragua, left for the interior yesterday and immediately took up arms.

There were mutterings in oppositionists' camps of revolution as Grau San Martin persisted in his refusal to accede to demands of five powerful political groups that he make way for a "national government.

"I will quit," he countered, "when anybody who has a right to ask me to resign does so."

He made the statement at the conclusion of a meeting with a committee of Rotarians who, as mediators, gave him separate memoranda from the OCRS and ABC political societies, Col. Carlos Mendieta's Nationalists, former President Menocal's group, and the Marianistas of Miguel Mariano Gomez.

"It doesn't matter who is President," Dr. Grau San Martin asserted, "so long as the revolutionary program is carried out."

The government, meanwhile, proceeded with its plans. It set May 20, 1934, for a constitutional convention, whose delegates will be elected April 1, 1934.

The treasury department reported that September collections were running more than a half million dollars behind, but that it believed it would be able to make September payments.

In an outbreak of violence that added to the burden of labor unrest, one civilian was killed and another wounded in front of the National Hotel.

A group of merchants' associations agreed to postpone their threatened 24-hour closing set for today in protest against "acts of violence," but declared they might close without notice if the government delays in forming a "reconcentration cabinet."

U. S. Shifts More Craft to Cuba's Trouble Zone

Washington, Sept. 19 (AP)—Continued tension and a possibility of a change in the Cuban political line-up were reported here today in private advices, while the navy shifted warships around Cuba to afford maximum protection to American citizens if called on.

The destroyers Overton and Sturtevant were ordered from Guantanamo Bay to Antilla, on the northeastern coast of the island, where continued labor troubles were reported.

Information reaching the State Department caused officials to continue a keen watch upon conference still proceeding in Havana between leaders of the split political factions.

In addition to the destroyers proceeding toward Antilla, where a coast guard cutter stood by this morning, the Navy stationed the destroyer Hamilton at Manzanillo, where it was reported outsiders coming into the cit, might cause trouble in addition to the labor difficulties now experienced there.

More destroyers stood by at other points.

America, Japan and Peace in the Pacific

Japan has its sphere of influence and activity. America should keep out of it.

The League of Nations must indulge in futile meddling, perhaps. It seems to be capable of nothing else.

But our country, fortunately, is not a part of the league, and does not have to meddle.

It has its independence. It has its own sphere of activity and influence.

Japan does not assume to tell the United States what it shall do in Cuba or Nicaragua or elsewhere in the sphere which circumstances prescribe for us.

Why should we assume to interfere with Japan?

That has been my policy.

That is my policy.

* * *

THE great hope I have is that Japan and the United States, both forward looking nations, both powerful factors in the progress of the world, shall not conflict—especially that they shall not come to a conflict of arms.

Such a conflict would not only be disastrous to these nations; it would be destructive in its effect upon the progress of the world.

So I say to America, keep out of Japan's domain; and I say to Japan—when requested to speak—keep out of America's domain.

Maintain a wholesome respect for each other and each other's purposes, and keep the peace.

Adequate preparedness will help us to maintain a wholesome respect for each other, and help us to keep the peace.

Nothing is so provocative of war as the weakness which is an invitation to aggression.

Sincerely yours,
WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

BOSTON BREWERS ARE MENACED BY NEW BEER RACKETEERS

PUBLIC IS ASKED TO HELP FIGHT GANGSTERS

'Barons' Are Attempting to Gain Control of All Distribution

Beer racketeering, which in New York has led to an appeal for public aid in stopping it, is flourishing in Boston, Joseph E. Doherty, president of the Commercial Brewery of Charlestown, charged today.

He advocated an advertising campaign similar to that started by the New York Brewers' Board of Trade, asking persons with knowledge of beer racketeering to communicate with the authorities or the brewers' organization.

"Local brewers are helpless," he said, "because of the lack of assistance in the Alcoholic Beverages Commission, which handles the licensing of beer sellers."

Doherty revealed he had reported to Federal authorities that at least one out-of-state concern was using the containers of the Commercial Co. He added that Massachusetts brewers are furnishing only 10 per cent of the beer consumed in this state.

ASK PUBLIC TO HELP

In New York newspaper advertisements appeared today captioned: "To Law-Abiding Citizens From Law-Abiding Brewers." They said that:

"Newspaper reports indicate that the distribution of beer is in some instances in the hands of the lawless element which controlled it during the days of prohibition." The advertisements stated the brewers propose to see that racketeering, threats or intimidation shall play no part in the business."

"I'd like to see something like that here," said Pres. Doherty.

"I understand there is plenty of racketeering, but the state board has no assistants to make investigations so we are helpless. They have been using some of our containers, one firm selling beer at retail for less than we could sell it to jobbers.

USE STAMPS AGAIN

"I reported to the Federal authorities that an out-of-state concern was using our packages, with the $2.50 government stamp tucked away under the shipping tag so it could be used over again."

"We can't stand up against that sort of thing. It has made the situation very disagreeable in Massachusetts, where local brewers furnish only about 10 per cent of the supply.

"In addition we are taxed so heavily that it makes high prices. Before the beer gets to the consumer it has got to pay a profit to the jobber, wholesaler and retailer."

After 44 Wedded Years, 'Fitz' Is Still 'Honey Boy' to Wife

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

That was former Mayor John F. "Honey" Fitzgerald's answer to what it means to be 44 years married to the same woman.

The one-time chief executive of Boston, who made famous "Sweet Adeline" and its tuneful melody, and Mrs. Fitzgerald, last night, among friends and relatives, celebrated their 44th wedding anniversary at their Welles ave., Dorchester, home.

LOOKS TO GOLDEN WEDDING

But that isn't enough for "Honey" Fitzgerald. His one great ambition and the goal of his desires is to celebrate his golden wedding anniversary, six years hence.

"The greatest achievement of any man should be the celebrating of the half-century mark of marriage with the same woman," he said yesterday.

Rugged and healthy, the warbler of "Sweet Adeline," delved into the memories of the past, when a man had to court a girl with a horse and buggy, and even at that couldn't go very far away from home. He compared the slow-moving joys of the past with the complicated rapidity of the present; the ever-watchful eye of parents of yesterday with the impossibility of such guardianship today.

BACK TO GAY NINETIES

Former Mayor Fitzgerald was in a reminiscent mood as he talked about the "good old days" of simple courtship by means of buggy and the girl's parlor, in which the girl's parents were always present.

But he did not confine his remarks simply to love in the gay nineties. From love he moved to the significant meaning of NRA which he insists should be made a daily part of school curriculum for the next few weeks.

And from the "economic ignorance of the American public which is amazing," he moved on to Boston politics and the "unprecedented absurdity of the mayoralty fight which is holding Boston up to ridicule and scorn to the rest of the country."

The singing politician was in a talkative frame of mind and to his well diversified thoughts he gave his active and alert mentality in expression.

"In the old days," he began, talking naturally of the days when he was a boy and Mrs. Fitzgerald was the attractive young woman who held his undivided fancy and interest, "we did our courting by means of horse and buggy. Mrs. Fitzgerald's father had a horse and I hired the buggy, thereby saving money. Youngsters nowadays are so different.

"Give them a high-powered auto in which they can drive to the far corners of Heaven knows where and they are happy. Let them keep moving, always on the hop, and they think they are having the time of their lives. Let them go 60 miles an hour and that is the height of their

TESTED GOODS ARE DEMANDED BY BUYERS

Katharine Fisher Tells Retailers Housewives Stress the Quality

The standard of living in American households is constantly being raised but housewives, buying mechanical equipment and other aids are increasingly demanding proof of quality, Katharine A. Fisher, director of Good Housekeeping Institute, told members of the Boston Conference on Retail Distribution today.

"Mere claims of quality are not enough," she said.

"The fact that our own testing service has grown so rapidly over a period of 25 years, with increasing numbers of shoppers using our list of aproved products as a buying guide, is an indication of the value of merchandise of tested quality in the minds of the buying public.

TEST TO RETAILER, TOO

"This is of peculiar significance to retailers. If tested quality is sponsored by an unbiased authority well known to the customers, it is a plus value because of the confidence which that authority has built up in the minds of shoppers. It becomes for the buyer a sort of supersalesman, a selling force that cuts down sales resistance.

"There is another important factor that we cannot afford to overlook in considering the value of tested quality to the retailer. The retailer is also being tested, the quality of his service and his salesmanship.

"The cleanliness and general appearance of the store, courteous and intelligent service, prompt deliveries and satisfactory attention to complaints—these all add to the value of his merchandise, for he is measuring up to the standards of even his most exacting customers.

CONSUMER EDUCATION

"In selling merchandise for use in the household, you are selling standards of living, and that these standards are definitely influenced by the type of salesmanship you offer.

"The satisfactory use of the product sold, whether it be a pound of coffee or a kitchen range is a question that deserves more consideration in present day merchandising.

"All too frequently we find that a household product of proved quality is not giving satisfaction because the purchaser does not know how to use it properly.

"Manufacturers are giving increasing attention to the education of the consumer in the proper use of their merchandise. The salesman has an excellent opportunity to use this information to advantage in selling the product. This necessitates a careful study of the merchandise the salespeople are handling. The extent to which they do this cannot but have a significant effect on distribution."

The animal, frightened, bolted from Boylston and Arlington sts., to Columbus ave., where O'Halloran tried to stop the horse, but missed, then commandeered the car and gave chase, blowing his whistle to warn traffic.

The horse swung into Tremont st. at Castle sq. O'Halloran sped past, leaped from the running board and was dragged some distance by the horse before stopping it.

Junior League Widow Is Bride in London

Mrs. Grafton Smith Weds John Douglas Little

In picturesque Savoy Chapel, just off London's Strand, Mrs. Janice Vaughan Smith, member of the Vincent Club and Junior Leaguer of Boston, was married today to John Douglas Little, Jr., of Pittsburgh, a native of England.

Only six years ago, the former Janice Vaughan of Boston and Hamilton, sister of Norman Vaughan, executive officer of Admiral Byrd's new South Polar expedition, was a debutante, but since then she has been previously married and widowed.

Her first husband, Grafton Smith, Boston and Hamilton sportsman, was fatally injured in an automobile crash two years ago while returning from the races at Saratoga.

About 100 guests attended the ceremony today at London's noon, the full choral service being utilized.

The bride was given away by her mother, Mrs. George Cutts Vaughan of "Voomere" at Hamilton, and her only attendants were Mrs. Joseph W. Woods of Hamilton, matron of honor, and Miss Frances Goodwin of Hamilton and Aiken, S. C., maid of honor.

After the ceremony the couple said they would honeymoon in Paris before sailing for the United States and opening a home in Sewickley Heights, near Pittsburgh, where the bridegroom is associated with Pennsylvania Airlines.

Mrs. Little is a graduate of the Ethel Walker School, 1927, and made her debut in October of the same year. In March of 1928 she was married to Grafton Smith, who died on September 5, 1931.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Douglas Little of Ethandune Hall, Hoylake, Cheshire, England, and was graduated from Eton and from Trinity College, Cambridge, Eng.

$10,000 THEFT IS CHARGED TO 5 BROTHERS

South Boston Men Are Held for Looting Warehouse

Five South Boston brothers were aroused from sleep early today by a heavily armed police raiding squad and taken into custody in connection with the $10,000 looting of a big food warehouse in D st. last Christmas night.

The quintet, who at first attempted escape and then offered resistance were finally subdued and forced to dress with guns leveled at their heads.

ARMED SQUAD IN RAID

They gave their names as William G. Flaherty, 21; John I., 25; Sylvester J., 19; Paul, 17, and Edward, 22, all of Athens st., South Boston.

Lieut. Tiernan, Sergts. John J. Devine and John J. Foley and a detail of 12 patrolmen made up the raiding squad.

ROUTED FROM BEDS

Five officers walked upstairs to the Flaherty home on the second floor and found the five brothers asleep in bed. They aroused them and ordered them to put on their clothing. The youths rushed to the windows hoping to escape but saw the cordon of officers around the house.

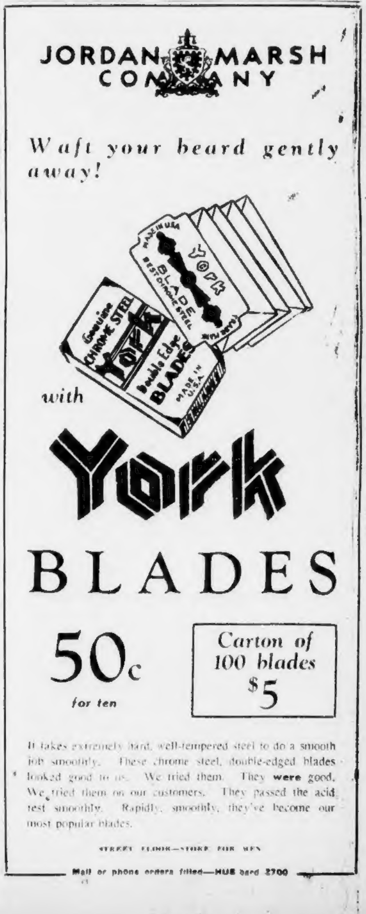

Police also claim the five are wanted for 52 robberies and holdups in Greater Boston, with at least 27 of these crimes occurring in the city proper.

The looting of the food warehouse was a daring robbery, skillfully executed. Four men took part. They bound and gagged the watchman and his son, and calmly loaded a large truck in the warehouse with cigarettes and food. Two loads were taken away, valued in all at $10,000.

'Aimee's Man' Awaits Her, But Loves Chorus Girls

New York, Sept. 19 (INS)—David Hutton, billed in Brooklyn today as "Aimee's man," expects to hear from his evangelist wife within the next 24 hours, he revealed in an interview today.

Before she turns her attention to saving souls on Broadway, which she plans to do four times a day at the Capitol theater beginning Friday, he is confident she will get in touch with him.

"I hope she has a great evangelist meeting," he said, as he sat in his dressing room, fresh from a footlight rendition of "Take Me as I Am." "I will be doing my best to evangelize the palace while she is here, only I won't do it with religion.

"She says she still love me, but she does everything in the world except show it. A man has a right to expect his wife to trust him," he said plaintively.

With a sob in her voice Aimee said it was "those awful pictures of you with a bunch of chorus girls" that hurt her most," Hutton said.

"Why, I've never known a nicer bunch of girls than chorus girls," said Hutton. "They're as sweet as any of the women in the whole Angelus Temple. Always reading and sewing.

"They don't approve of smoking, drinking or the theater in the Angelus Temple. They don't call what Aimee's doing the theater. But I say you can't get up in a theater along with actors and not be an actor yourself. I hope she has many souls for hire, and does what any good vaudeville trouper would do."

'Honey' Fitz Now Looks To Golden Wedding

ambition. In the old days a couple couldn't get very far, but today in an auto they are gone before parents even see them.

LIFE EASY FOR YOUNG

"In the old days most all the boys and girls knew how to play a musical instrument and gathering around a piano while the crowd sang the songs of the day was the acme of fun. But today, what with the radio and the ready-to-place orchestra, it is hard to find but a few in a gathering who can sit down and turn out good music on some instrument. Life has been made pretty easy for the young folks.

"The greatest happiness a man can achieve, the finest lesson a man can learn of modern civilization is to be able to celebrate his 50th wedding anniversay. Happy though married. No, sir. Married and happy. A golden wedding that's my goal! The acme of achievement for me is to be married 50 years and enjoy happy marital relations."

Suddenly, with no word of transition, the exponent of "Sweet Adeline" lunged into an excoriation of the muddled state of Boston's mayoralty fight.

He virtually wept over the sad state of affairs into which the city has been thrown by the growing aspirants to Mayor Curley's chair at City Hall, making use of the moment to attack former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols who seeks election and his connection with the Charles Innes machine.

"STOP NICHOLS," HIS CRY

"The Republican racketeers must be kept out of City Hall," he blisteringly announced. "No city in the country has been made so terrible a spectacle of as has Boston by the clawing hands of so many candidates. I have no special candidate of my own. My prime interest now is in stopping Nichols.

"I was delighted to see Senator Parkman come out and so strongly oppose Nichols and Innes and his combination. It shows that even the Republicans have some regard for the welfare of the city's affairs and that City Hall must be kept honest for an honest mayor.

"Women have no place in the fight. The mayoralty is a man's job. No woman, particularly a Democratic woman, should take advantage of the bemuddled situation these days and try to crash through on a capitalization of broken parties."

LAUDS NRA PRINCIPLES

Seemingly done with political appraisal, the "Sweet Adeline" yodler became even more serious when he sounded the urgent need of the introduction into the schools of half an hour daily instruction in the interpretation of NRA principles.

"Boston is in a very serious plight as is the whole country. Let them say what they will debt and taxes are piling up. It is our job as the older generation to teach the generation of tomorrow the great economic lessons of life. Greek and Latin are all very good in their place, but in these times they have no place along side the economic understanding of the city, state and national housekeeping.

"In other parts of the world they fight wars with bloodshed. In this country we are fighting a war with the dollars and cents of sustained humanity. The economic ignorance of American people is amazing, beyond belief. If I had my way the NRA would be home lesson in every public school of the country.

AWAY TO GREET WIFE

"Let us pound into the minds of every high school and college student the meaning of NRA that the future might be fortified against repetition of these trying days. Today we are fighting for civilization which is at stake. We are fighting an economic battle, fighting to keep the ship afloat. Let us make every student NRA conscious as a precautionary measure against the insidious forces that lurk in our classrooms and in our social halls.

"What with the millions of students thoroughly acquainted with the meaning of NRA, tomorrow's generation need never fear the diabolic system of unfair distribution that has robbed us today of our livihood."

With a smile a handshake and a cheery-goodbye, the former mayor was gone—gone to Cape Cod to "gather up" Mrs. Fitzgerald and to bring her home to Dorchester to greet and meet a few friends and relatives and to enjoy with her husband their 44th wedding anniversary.

ANNEXATION OF ROXBURY

BRITISH NAVAL PLOT AGAINST U. S. CHARGED

Washington, Sept. 19 (INS) — Great Britain's effort to hold up part of the American $238,000,000 naval building program is doomed to failure, it was predicted in authoritative sources today.

The British attempt was made in conversations Norman H. Davis, America's roving disarmament envoy, had with British government officials in London over the week-end, and has caused much resentment here.

Although the State Department refused to comment on the British suggestions pending consideration by President Roosevelt, it was believed they related to the long-harbored desire of Britain to induce the United States to refrain from building 10,000-ton 8-inch gun cruisers.

CRUISERS IN DISPUTE

The British prefer a maximum of 7,000 tons for cruisers, regarding these smaller ships as just as useful as the 10,000-ton vessels for patrolling and protecting the far-flung possessions of the British Empire. On the other hand, the United States, with its longer coastlines to defend, considers the 10,000-ton ship more beneficial to its particular needs.

Navy men here view British overtures to Davis as an effort to hamper the upbuilding of American defense forces rather than a mere dispute over cruiser tonnage.

Britain built 7,000-ton vessels. This government made no attempt to build 10,000-ton ships until the present program was adopted. This program calls for four 10,000-ton vessels.

CONTRACTS AWARDED

Contracts for the construction of these ships, two in private yards and two in government yards, already have been awarded.

If this country proceeds with the construction of these vessels, it may make it more difficult to obtain an agreement for their restriction at the next naval conference in 1935.

4 NEAR DEATH IN AUTO CRASH

Salisbury, Sept. 19. Four persons were critically injured early today when two autos met head-on in Elm st., here, when one of the machines attempted to pass a wagon while his view was obstructed. The injured were taken to the Anna Jacques Hospital in Newburyport by Chief of Police Harold G. Congdon and members of the Salisbury police department.

Frank Kelley, of Newburyport, internal revenue collector for this district, and his wife, suffered possible skull fractures and internal injuries. Herbert Cohen, 25, of 106 Kenoza ave., Haverhill, and his wife, who were riding in a machine operated by Cohen, were cut by flying glass. Their condition was said to be critical.

According to Salisbury police, Kelley was driving his car towards Amesbury and Cohen was going in the direction of Newburyport. Cohen is alleged to have cut out from behind a wagon load of hay, and in doing so crashed into the Kelley machine. Both cars were demolished.

30 CALLED FOR FEDERAL PROBE

A new United States grand jury took up investigation of the $60,000,000 Federal National Bank crash today, with nearly 30 witnesses, including bank officials and employes, on hand to testify.

Four to six indictments are expected, some of them possibly tomorrow, according to reports about the Federal Building, where the grand jury met on the 11th floor of the new structure.

Investigation of alleged "straw" loans is understood to be the chief feature of the probe which encompasses not only the Boston bank but three of its affiliates.

Ledgers, cash books and other records of the Federal National Bank were carried into the grand jury room.

Entries on these books involving $600,000 was said to be under consideration. One item of $100,000 is said to relate to a reputed "straw" loan in which the Inman Trust Co. of Cambridge figured. A $400,000 item is also understood to be undergoing scrutiny.

COAKLEY TO RUN SAY FRIENDS

John F. Fitzgerald, Chairman Joseph A. Maynard of the state committee and others, would take the initiative and seriously call for a conference, the chances would be good for a solution of the party problem through wholesale withdrawals.

Getting back to the Parkman candidacy, the appeal which it has made is regarded as little more than astonishing. Former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller, himself an astute politician, quickly sensed this appeal and gave it impetus by his warm endorsement of the Back Bay man.

Parkman went into the fight only after considerable thought. He is a poor man, and the question of finances is a serious one. His friends endowed with this world's goods will have to be his financial backers. And a candidate who is out to win usually needs a campaign fund of around $75,000 to $100,000.

Notwithstanding the problem of money which faced him, Parkman believes that there were two compelling reasons for him to get in. One, the first, was his concern for the welfare of his city, and the other was concern for his party, the G. O. P.

No other honorable course could be taken by him, he believes, and continue to remain in politics.

With Miss Ward out of the contest, there is only one woman, so far as known now, who is considering tossing her chapeau into the ring. This is Mrs. Jennie Loitman Barron, former school committee member. She is a Republican.

Head of Houghton's Sees Better Time

New York City, Sept. 19—Optimistic over business prospects for fall, A. W. Ackermann, president of the Houghton & Dutton Co. of Boston, discusses the retailer's part in business recovery in an article which appears in the current issue of the Advertising Almanac, published in New York by Hearst newspapers.

He believes that retail stores can help stimulate buying activity this fall most effectively by using their advertising to emphasis all home and personal needs that the store carries, instead of riminding the public of only a few department offerings.

A complete line of all merchandise will be the best basis for determining which store is most popular, he declares. With prices on the rise, small differences will have lost their lure within a short time and autumn purchases will see more attention centered on the quality and the service of the merchandise, Mr. Ackermann believes.

willing to cross the ocean, men and women that have created the United States in the past, have been shut out for the last ten years and more on the ground that to allow immigration might "hurt our prosperity." Do you think our prosperity has been so remarkable since we made up our minds to keep out the men we need to give the country new blood and new energy? Texas could feed the earth's entire population.

It is well for human peace of mind that the average human being does not know how big the universe is, or how unimportant is this little grain of sand we call the earth.

An old lady, with great care, picks out the spot where she wants to lie in the cemetery, because "there I shall know all the people around me. In another part of the graveyard, I'd be among strangers."

Near Tucson, Ariz., Dr. Byron Cummings, of the University of Arizona archaeology department, finds "apartment houses" 600 years old, built up by Hopi Indians that buried very young children under the floor of their dwelling, so that the baby spirits could be near their mothers. The Hopis still continue that custom.

CAHILL'S TRAIL LEADS TO CANADA

in Andover and a former girl friend in the same town have been questioned, but have been unable to give any information as to his whereabouts.

By a Lawrence mill worker who said he knows Cahill well, the missing man was placed today in South Lawrence on the afternoon of September 8, the day the McCarthy girl disappeared, and in Cahill's car, according to the mill worker, was a girl about 10 years old.

This girl, the mill worker told Lawrence police, wore a hair ribbon answering the one included in the description of the McCarthy girl.

This man declared he saw Cahill between 2:45 and 3 p. m., and he placed the time because he said he was on his way to work in the mill, where he was due at 2:15 p. m.

SEEN IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

Belief that another man is with Cahill in his flight was strengthened, Somerville police said today, in a report from Lebanon, N. H.

It came from the police chief there, who said two men, one of whom answered the description of the missing Cahill, stopped at a gasoline station last Friday and appeared "unduly nervous."

The second man seemed several years older than the one who answered Cahill's description. They asked directions to the derby line, the chief reported. Derby line is on the Canadian border.

Since search for Cahill was abandoned at Silver Lake, Wilmington, police announcing at that time they believed he had fled, detectives have intimated time and again that they believe the former cowboy, friend of Peggy's family and a constant visitor to his sister's Somerville home, had left his automobile at the lake as a "blind" and fled to another section of the country.

TWO MEN SEEN

The report of two men in the auto before police seized it as abandoned helped to strengthen the belief, police maintaining that one might have been Cahill and the other his companion in flight.

The new one resulted in a broadcast of telephone and telegraph messages to strategic points in New Hampshire and Vermont and as far as the Canadian border.

At the same time, investigators opened a minute and tedious check of Cahill's men acquaintances to learn whether or not any have left this section since the disappearance of Cahill.

The new turn closely followed a hoax that had raised the hopes of Cahill's elderly father for his son's return to face the charges that he was the last to see the little McCarthy girl alive.

DEMAND RANSOM

The hoax opened with a telephone call to the missing man's father, in which he was told his son was in the hands of kidnapers and would be released on payment of $3000.

Anxious to see his son, and equally anxious that the man return and explain away the suspicions against him, the 71-year-old father eagerly agreed to a meeting with "negotiators" and the scene was set in Fairmount st., Malden. He said he would send his daughter with the money.

With Miss Edith Taylor, Cambridge policewoman, as a decoy a trap was set for the negotiators.

At the rendezvous, police found only two newspapermen, one with a camera, who later said they had been "tipped off" to the negotiations and were waiting to make action photographs of the happenings. Police said Cahill's father rode to the spot with the two newspapermen, alighting with one to talk with Miss Taylor before the machine was surrounded.

CANNEY ANGRY

Capt. John J. Canney of the Cambridge police was angry at the newspapermen and one time threatened them with arrest but Dist.-Atty. Warren L. Bishop, leader in the probe, quieted the Cambridge inspector.

The elder Cahill, his hopes built up by the hoax, was a picture of despair when they collapsed.

"I had hoped something would come from this but, at the same time, I had steeled myself for the worst," he told a Boston Evening American reporter.

"I cannot understand the mind of a person who could conceive and carry out such a contemptible act on me and my daughter, Mrs. Houghton, at a time like this.

"I am 71 years old. I have gone through a long life that has had its ups and downs but in all those 71 years I have suffered more these past seven days than during my entire life.

"This act has hurt me a lot. However, I am still confident that my boy, if he is still alive, will get in touch with me."

Another examination of Cahill's abandoned car turned attention today to the trunk that was carried on the rear. Police Chief Thomas Damery of Somerville said he "wouldn't say there weren't" bloodstains found in the trunk.

Neither would he comment on reports that the McCarthy girl's body was cramped in such a position that it might have been carried in the trunk of an automobile.

The countrywide search for Cahill, marked by the first radio plea to a public for aid in apprehending a fugitive from Middlesex County, will take on a wider scale after today's arrival of his wartime fingerprints from Washington, Dist.-Atty. Bishop said.

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW
Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

STEADY SMOKERS TURN TO CAMELS

Discussing healthy nerves and cigarettes, Colonel Roscoe Turner says: "Breaking air records is an exciting business—and a nerve-wracking one! I know because I have gone out after a whole flock of records—and managed to pick off quite a few. Like most pilots I smoke a lot—before I jockey my plane into position for the take-off—after the flight is over—in fact, I enjoy smoking any time. But I watch my nerves as carefully as I do my plane. I smoke Camels for the sake of healthy nerves, and I enjoy them more because of their mildness and better taste. To me Camels are a much finer cigarette, and being a faithful Camel smoker, I never have to give a thought to jangled nerves."

Are you nervous? Irritable? Try Camels for a change, and get a fresh slant on your smoking. Being a milder cigarette, Camels are better for steady smoking. You will find it a fact that Camels never get on your nerves... never tire your taste.

The Keyhole on the News

Are Y' Listenin'?

Joe Cook, who remains a week before holding his horses on the course to Broadway, slipped the universe a hint that may be vital in these days when many may talk but few will listen.

"When an audience gets restless," says Joe, "I never raise my voice in order to regain its attention. On the contrary, I invariably lower it. And they get paying attention again. It's not only good for an inattentive audience but for inattentive persons, as well. People may get tired of hearing things on the one hand—or the one ear—but just the same they want to be darn sure they don't miss anything."

Goody-Goody

"I like mountain music all right," says Hal Torrence, "but I wish to declare that I cannot go for the ordinary precision-voiced radio announcer. I know it's a gag and I ought to be patient but I'm not and what is furthermore, I ain't. When I was a kid my mother was always telling me not to "swallow my words." She would frequently nail attention to some simply devoute lad in the neighborhood who wore a Lord Fauntleroy collar and took elocution lessons. They all talked like these radio announcers do now. I remember those blamed gushers! When I turn on the dial now I feel like saying: "Oh, brand Twenty-three skiddoo! Go way back and sit down and let somebody play something."

Minor Boom

Joel Sayre, satirist, who after a brief Boston stay is now in Hollywood, is much impressed by the re-action of that gay whirlwind to the hard times which we all left back of that last corner.

"They don't refer to it as the late depression," writes Joel, "they just say it was the lightest boom in years.

Magic

A Boston clergyman who has for many years devoted himself to down and outers met a man at the entrance to Tremont Temple yesterday who asked for a little money. The clergyman felt in his pocket, found four cents and gave it to the man, apologizing for not having the additional cent for a cup of coffee. Quick as a wink the man reached in the clergyman's pocket and brought out a dollar bill.

"How about this?" he asked.

The clergyman was both astounded and indignant.

"I didn't even know I had it" he said, in almost unconscious explanation.

"You didn't" said the man, returning the four cents and keeping the bill.

It was an old friend of the clergyman, a former sleight-of-hand performer, who used to entertain the clerk long ago when drinking bought the performer to the city charitable institutions.

TWOHIG BLAMES LABOR FOR 'L' SITUATION

Blame fro continuance of public control of the elevated and the alleged milking of taxpayers through assessments of deficits and guaranteed dividends to the tune of millions of dollars, was today placed squarely upon the shoulders of organized labor leaders by former Sen. James J. Twohig of South Boston.

Speaking before the special committee of the Legislature created to study and report on a permanent solution of the El problem, Twohig, who fought for years for public ownership, said that if it had not been for the activities of the labor group the referendum of 1920 would have been overwhelmingly in favor of the state taking over the road.

LABOR STEPPED IN

He said Henry I. Harriman, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Elevated directors and others had unsuccessfully led the fight for continued public control for six years, and that the roll call in the House in 1920 showed but 30 votes for continuance.

Then the labor group headed by the late A. F. Vahey, James A. Moriarty and Robert Watt, he said, came into the picture, the question of continuance of public ownership was added to the referendum questions, and funds of the union were used in the election to put that question over.

"How long," Twohig asked, "are the privileged stockholders of the Boston Elevated going to be allowed to pillage the people of the metropolitan district to the tune of $1,193,570 yearly in dividends on a guaranteed basis?"

GOLDEN STREAM

To think of turning the road back now, he stated, is more unpopular than ever before. He declared that many of those who voted for public operation are now openly for purchasing the road and he charged that the voters were deliberately confused at the time the referendum was taken.

Without taking into account the millions that have since been put into the road, he said, a veritable golden stream was poured into it in the 10 years from 1918 on. He reckoned the amount at $100,000,000 put in during that period.

"Why should we turn that back to the owners?" he asked. "That belongs to the people."

GRENFELL CREW ESCAPE STORM

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 19 (AP)—The 76-foot Grenfell mission schooner Jessie Galtwait, manned by American University undergraduates, is safe at Liscomb, N. S., after a hazardous voyage through Atlantic storms from the northern coast of Newfoundland.

The students are homeward bound after spending the summer at mission stations where they were under command of Edward A. B. Willmer, who is carrying on the work during the illness of Sir Wilfred Grenfell.

Willmer arrived in Halifax last night, accompanied by Will Herby of Columbia University, Henry Little of Harvard and Cliff Baker of Pennsylvania. They will leave for home by train today. Jack Scranton of Princeton, Dave Stoddart of Yale and Geo. S. Rawley will sail the Jessie Galtwait to Portland, Me.

3 Austrians Killed in Anti-Nazi Riots

Vienna, Sept. 19 (AP)—Fatal riots over the week-end added to the uneasiness of the people today as Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss returned from a vacation in the country and started new conferences with leaders of the various political parties.

Three men were killed and 12 wounded at Wolfsegg, near Linz, in a clash between Nazis and members of the Heimwehr (which is pro-Italian Fascist). Several Nazis were bayonetted in Carinthia in riots resulting from the removal of Nazi burgomasters, and in Styria a member of the Heimwehr was killed.

Jazz King Started Bing on Way to Fortune

(This is the second of a series of five articles written exclusively for the Boston Evening American by BING CROSBY, soon to appear in his latest picture for Paramount, "Too Much Harmony." The third article will appear tomorrow.)

(Featured in Paramount's "Too Much Harmony," coming on Friday to the Metropolitan Theater.)

Al Rinker, my college pal, could play the piano. I could play the traps. And like most college students of o.. day, that combination automatically lead to the formation of a band—a grand way of earning tuition fees at college.

We played at college dances, until, one night, a Chanter manager in Spokane heard us and booked our seven-place outfit into his theater. After a taste of singing behind the footlights, I didn't want to be a lawyer.

What is it about grease paint and footlights that gets under your skin and just out kills every other ambition?

WHITEMAN SEES HIM

Al and I got the bug bad. We decided to go to Los Angeles to see what we could do there. And there we met Al's sister, known all over the country as Mildred Bailey, that rockin' chair lass. She got us a berth singing in the Tent Cafe which was run by Mike Lyman, brother of Maestro Abe Lyman, of radio fame. Then came a short vaudeville engagement.

One night, Paul Whiteman decided to take a "bus-man's holiday"—and it changed my whole life. Paul was playing in the Million Dollar Theater in Los Angeles. Al and I were doing a turn in the Metropolitan. Between performances, Paul dropped into the Metropolitan—just for a change, and he made us an offer.

When Paul left for New York he took us with him, and in the Big City, Harry Barris joined us. We formed the original Rhythm Boys. And that association kept up for three solid years when in 1930 Paul took us to California to make the picture, "The King of Jazz."

And here's an interesting sidelight on fame. Al, Harry and I appeared in "The King of Jazz" for about three minutes. Today, when they revive that picture, I understand that they're giving me big billing wherever it is shown.

Once you've lived in California, you're not apt to want to live any place else. And Al, Harry and I asked Paul to release us after we made the picture, that we might remain on the West Coast. Paul agreed and we got a job in the Cocoanut Grove in Los Angeles. That's where events really began happening in my life.

'OPERATOR 13' By Robert W. Chambers

Col. Sharpe Determines to Send Gail After Capt. Gailliard

READ THIS FIRST

Gail Loveless, beautiful and daring Union spy known as Operator 13, went to Culpeper, Va., to checkmate the work of Antonia Ford, a Confederate spy who had kept Gen. Jeb Stuart so well informed that Gen. Stoneman, the Union cavalry leader, never was able to surprise him.

Operator 13 became Antonia Ford's house guest. At a party she met Capt. Jack Gailliard, gallant Confederate spy, whom she had once outwitted and captured, only to release him. He did not recognize her now because, in their earlier encounters, she had been disguised as a colored girl.

Now, however, he declared himself in love with her at sight and she, already in love with him, kissed him and promised that some time she would be his wife. Then she saw him ride away with Antonia Ford on a secret mission.

So well did she do her work that Antonia Ford was captured, but she was herself exposed in turn and fled, on horseback, for her life. With her brave colleague, John Babcock, she reached the quarters of Col. Sharpe, chief of the Federal secret service, to whom she reported, and then became drowsy from fatigue.

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan production made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Marion Davies.)

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Col. Sharpe rose, picked up Operator 13, shawl and all, and, holding her in his muscular arms, walked through the tented corridor into a log cabin where a large fat Negress was soaping clothes in a washtub.

"Aunty," said he, "here's a tired and very sore young lady who would enjoy a hot soaping, some arnica, some clean blankets, a hot supper and a warm bed. Because she must be well rested and all ready to do some very important business for me by tomorrow, see that she is fit and ready."

"I am glad to hear you say so . . . Aunty Chloe, you are the best doctor and the best nurse in camp. I leave Miss Loveless to you." Still smiling he placed the girl upon a camp chair, bade her sleep well and walked back to his own quarters.

"John," said the Colonel, "at last we've got Antonia Ford. A dangerous woman. But there's a far more dangerous man loose. We must catch him—and quickly."

"You mean Capt. Gailliard, sir?"

"I do. I do, indeed."

"Very well, sir. I'm quite ready—"

"No. I'm going to send another operator."

"I'll tell you something you don't know," continued Col. Sharpe quietly. "Jack Gailliard is now inside our lines and on his way North."

"Do you know why he is traveling North, sir?"

"I do. And I have every secret service agent and detective in Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Boston watching for him. The trouble is, I have no description of him. But I have an agent who knows him personally; and I'm going to send her after him."

"A woman, sir?"

TERRIBLE DECISION

"I'm going to send Miss Loveless after him," said Col. Sharpe pleasantly.

John Babcock looked at his chief.

"I don't much care how I get Jack Gailliard," added Col. Sharpe, "but I have positive orders from the President to arrest him. And I believe I know how to do it." He laid a kindly hand on the young scout's arm. "Now, John, go to your quarters and eat and sleep. I count on you. I need you right here with me. There is serious trouble brewing for the Union in the North. And God knows we're in trouble here.

"That cold swift river, yonder, has been a ghastly River Styx for thousands of us. And thousands more are doomed to cross it. Because Gen. Hooker is taking the field to win or lose everything as soon as the rebel cavalry and ours have fought it out along this tragic river.

"You have done well. You always do well. You have very gallantly upheld every tradition of this corps. A sound and refreshing sleep to you, John."

Miss Loveless slept all night long and all the following day until nearly 3 in the afternoon. When she awoke she saw her camp trunk and valises standing beside her cot and her own fresh underwear laid out beside her pretty traveling gown, pork pie hat, parasol and kid gloves. Spring sunshine filled the log hut. Robins chirped and chirked outside.

* * *

AWAKENING

"Aunty Chloe," she called, sitting up in her blankets to free her eyes of the thick, curly hair.

"Yath-m yath'm," replied Aunt Chloe, waddling in from somewhere in the outer sunshine.

Operator 13 yawned and looked up sleepily at the merry, fat, black countenance a-flash with snowy teeth. 'Please give me another bath and rub,' she begged.

"Yath'm, ma'am. I'se gwine curry yuh an' rub yuh lak yuh wuz de prize filly at de fair! I'se gwine pat yuh an' scrub yuh an' soap yuh, an' shine yuh an' twis' yuh most' in two twill yuh shms an' laigs is jes' a-kickin' tuh dance de Pea-vine!"

"Oh, dear," yawned Operator 13, "I'm sore all over."

But when she stepped into the steaming washtub and sank down with a contented sigh, her stiffness and soreness left her like magic under Aunt Chloe's massage, and youth and health and the excitement of impending new adventure did the rest. Dressed at last, the girl was quite ready to dance the "Peavine" or to follow the devious and secret "Grapevine" from root to the uttermost convolution of its mysterious tendrills.

APPETITE UNIMPAIRED

Aunt Chloe, beaming with pride at her handiwork, cooked bacon and eggs and made beaten biscuit, and Operator 13 ate with appetite unimpaired by her experiences of the day before.

She really was quite lovely to look upon; and she left Aunt Chloe mesmerized, standing in an admiring daze as an ambulance drove up for the girl's luggage.

Col. Sharpe was very busy in his quarters, but not too busy to welcome Operator 13; and he had his big wall tent cleared to receive her. At first glimpse of the radiant young girl he became certain that she was exactly the person he needed.

"You look very charming, ma'am," he said, rising and placing a rocking chair for her by a table. Then he pulled his own camp chair up in front of the table, drew some papers from his inside pocket and spread them before her. "Miss Loveless," he said, "did you ever hear of the Sons of Liberty?"

"No, sir."

"Then you are going to hear about them now. The league called the Sons of Liberty is a military and secret organization formed in the North by Southern sympathizers. Its object is to attack and destroy the Union by armed force.

SERIOUS MENACE

"There are in the North nearly half a million members of this secret military society plotting to ruin the United States. One more smashing Confederate victory will be their signal to start another terrible rebellion in the North.

"Their supreme leader, known as 'Grand Commander,' is a well known Copperhead named C. L. Vallandigham. What they plot to do is to mobilize under Confederate officers and rise simultaneously, led by these selected leaders, seize the loyal states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky and Missouri and proclaim a new nation to be called the Northwest Confederacy.

"Split into three parts, the Union could not survive a second rebellion. The South eventually would whip us out of our boots; the Northwest would dictate its own terms to us. Miss Loveless, we must end this menace or it will put a final end to us."

The girl was scarcely breathing now, so intent was she upon what this quiet, polite man was saying.

Col. Sharpe watched her thoughtfully for a while. Then sinking his voice almost to a whisper:

"I have told nobody, so far, something else that I am now going to admit to you: Gen. Lee is a better general than Gen. Hooker. He knows it, too; Hooker doesn't. But I think our unhappy President guesses it. Lee is certain that he is going to force Hooker into a disastrous battle and ruin him. And so utterly convinced is Lee of Hooker's impending destruction that the Confederate commissioners and Mr. Gaston have already sent northward a Confederate Secret Service agent to the grand commander of the Sons of Liberty with orders to mobilize immediately, seize the five northern states and burn the cities of New York, Boston and Philadelphia.

NAME REVEALED

"This agents," he continued calmly, "who has started North to give these orders, is a captain in the Confederate Secret Service. His name is John Gailliard. And I don't care whether he is killed or captured or driven across the Canadian border. But he carries on his person detailed plans for this new rebellion, and he must never deliver them." He looked her straight in the eyes. "You know Capt. Gailliard, I believe."

Shock left her inarticulate, but she managed to nod.

"Miss Loveless," he continued, "I believe you are the only secret service agent in our employment who can recognize this man at sight."

Again the girl inclined her head. Her face had become so white that Col. Sharpe regarded her narrowly.

"I am told," he continued, "that this man Gailliard does not hesitate to shoot. Therefore, in any emergency, I do not expect you to hesitate either."

"Where am I to find him, sir?"

"I don't know. Our agents in New York will make contact with you. Superintendent Kennedy of the metropolitan police will help you. All the New York railroad stations, docks, ferries and hotels are being watched. The trouble is, we have no description of Capt. Gailliard. That is where you will be helpful. And, Miss Loveless, don't forget that he is one of the most dangerous spies in the rebel service. Take no chances with such a man."

"My mission is to identify him, then?"

DEAD OR ALIVE

"Yes. I want his papers. And I want him, dead or alive."

She nodded.

"I don't know which of our operators will make contact with you. You know how to recognize them, of course?"

"Yes, sir."

"Very well. And please remember that trapped men shoot."

"Will Capt. Gailliard have others with him?"

"I don't know. Probably. Anyway, our agents are instructed to make a complete job of it."

"If Capt. Gailliard should surrender, would he be courtmartialed and hanged?" she inquired calmly.

"No doubt at all ma'am."

She said: "I thought you were opposed to spies, sir."

"I am. But you and I have nothing to say in that matter."

She was thinking very swiftly now, trying to imagine some way to find her lover and save him, without betraying the cause she served.

Col. Sharpe rose and walked away through the tented corridor toward a telegraph operator who appeared with a sheaf of telegrams.

The terrifying drama of it all was overwhelming the girl. Yet, even amid the chaos of clashing emotions, her ruling passion persisted. And she became agonizingly aware that never, never before had any woman been offered so stupendous a role to play before so vast an audience! Her stage the huge theater of war, the North and South her audience; all Europe looking on from the Nigger's Heaven—Napoleon and Victoria. She giggled hysterically.

DRAMATIC THRILL

Fascinated yet terrified, bewildered instinct urged her to seize the opportunity and accept everything it offered—every peril, every pang—even the bony embrace of Death itself. Her face was hotly flushed now; her eyes sparkled.

Comedy, melodrama, or tragedy—what did it matter if she were to play the supreme role of the century—the heroine of heroines, beset by half a million secret enemies, and fighting to save her country and, at the same time, the One Man who ever had mattered seriously to her in all her light-hearted life!

She saw herself in tragedy, dying by his bullet, forgiving him, asking his pardon of the President as her last reward. She saw herself triumphantly possessed of his fatal papers, paroling once more, bidding him go to Canada and live there harmlessly until the war ended and she could marry him.

But first and last and always paramount was her mind's loyal cry: "God save the United States!"—though she and he and millions more went down to stormy deaths amid the final cataclysm.

"Oh, heaven," she whimpered to herself, "what a role and what a death!—with the whole world applauding through its tears!"

Then, amid the chaotic excitement dislocating her mind she began to realize that Col. Sharpe had returned and was speaking to her again.

Was ever a woman confronted with a task more ghastly than this? Operator 13, for the country she loves, must hunt down and capture the man she loves, knowing that if he is captured he will be hanged. Only if she can compel or persuade him to flee to Canada will his life be safe—and duty will not permit her to do that unless she has first obtained his documents and spoiled his plans. Read tomorrow how she went about this terrible undertaking.

Black Suits Smart for Town

Be sure and pick outfit that best suits your type. There are at least three species, says accompanying article.

Never let it be said you haven't a fall suit in your wardrobe. One should be hanging there now, ready to pop out at the first cold-weather signal. We see many different types that are selling well. If you would be clever, then pick, without question, the suit that best fits your type.

It might be a woolen-striped, checked or plain, and definitely sporty with some long-haired fur snuggling close to the neck. Or, it may be a furless suit, with a foolish little dash of color in the shape of a scarf or kerchief knotted at the throat instead. You might look best in a suit with a new kind of long graceful coat, extravagantly full, and reflecting fashion's sudden interest in all things Arabian. (Incidentally, in the evening, this Arab's burnoose, slipped on over the head in the authentic manner worn by the Spahis on the African desert, is the smartest of all wraps.

It's really too difficult to classify any one type. Luxurious and unusual fabrics are the mainstay of every good American couturier. Of these, they make little "finger-tip coats, squared and double-breasted—these are very popular with women of youthful figures. Other suits have coats that come to the edge of the skirt, or that show an inch or two of skirt, or that come down just a trifle below the knees, to disclose a matching one-piece dress beneath. The seven-eighths length jacket offers most opportunities for fur trimmings.

If Fate forces you to be practical, then get a good black town suit or coat trimmed in black Persian lamb. It will carry you safely through the fall, and into the winter for that matter, if winters are not too harsh where you live!

The coat as well as the skirt can serve double duty for it can also be worn over a woolen dress contrasting in color, for bright dresses under dark woolen coats are very smart this year. The skirt also doubles up for costume purposes. With a metal cloth blouse, you're formally dressed for the afternoon in the same suit that sees another woman to work in a tailored satin blouse. Beware of tricky sleeves, tricky collars, tricky silhouettes.

Both suits sketched have great individuality, yet they're conservative and simple enough to appeal to smart women. Neither of them has been too commercialized to be desired by women of distinction.

Chancing a Freak Bid, Making Game by So Doing

By Josephine Culbertson

Sometimes players reach perfectly foolish contracts and find that they have a play to make the hand.

An example of this occurred the other day in a New York Bridge club when Mr. Geoffrey Mott-Smith found himself in the rather weird contract of four hearts on the following hand, and was also found that the hand was perfectly makable.

West	North	East
	♠ — ♡ K 9 6 ◇ 10 8 3 2 ♣ A K Q 6 5 4
♠ A K J 8 3 ♡ A 5 ◇ K 9 6 4 ♣ J 8	North / West / East / South	♠ 9 6 5 4 ♡ 7 4 3 ◇ A Q J 5 ♣ 3 2
	♠ Q 10 7 2 ♡ Q J 10 8 2 ◇ 7 ♣ 10 9 7 Mr. Mott-Smith

The bidding

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ♣	2 ♠	3 ♡
3 ♠	4 ♡	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

West, Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

The Opening lead was the king of spades, which Mr. Mott-Smith immediately ruffed in Dummy. Now he stopped and considered the hand very carefully. It seemed as though he should draw trumps in order to be able to run the clubs eventually. The trouble with this line of play is that the opponents will start running a few spade tricks. Mr. Mott-Smith finally realized that if a spade lead were to come from the West hand no harm would be done, but that if it came from the East hand it would be rather disastrous. He therefore immediately led a diamond from the board, establishing an entry in his own hand and shutting out East's entry completely.

As the play went, East went up with the Ace and led a trump. West took the trick with the Ace of hearts and led another trump. Mr. Mott-Smith had previously unblocked with the King of hearts and so was able to make the rest of the tricks.

It is apparent what would have happened if this line of play had not been followed. West would have refused to win the first round of trumps, and would have taken the second. He would then have led a diamond to his partner's Ace, and his partner would have returned a spade through Declarer's Queen-Ten. In this fashion, four tricks would have been taken and the contract defeated one trick.

The three-heart bid was daring in the extreme, for, after all, Mr. Mott-Smith held no card higher than a Queen. However, not being vulnerable, he felt he stood a good chance of defeating a contract of four spades if the other side could be driven to it.

Science Sought Rickets Cause for 300 Years

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

RICKETS IS NOT an affliction of modern times. It was first described in 1650 by the eminent English physician, Francis Glisson. At that time a severe epidemic was raging in London. A commission composed of prominent physicians and scientists was formed to study the disease and find a cure for it.

Dr. Copeland

However, almost 300 years passed before the actual cause of rickets was found. In 1914 it was discovered that rickets developed when there was a lack of vitamin D in the diet. That vitamin supplies the body with a substance necessary for normal growth and the development of strong bones and teeth.

I am glad to say that the disease is not as common as in the days of Glisson. We know now to prevent it. Adequate sunlight and the early administration of cod liver oil will guard the child against rickets.

Mothers of young infants are advised to give cod liver oil as early as the fourth week of life. This treatment should be continued through the second year. In addition, the child should be exposed to the beneficial action of the rays of the sun whenever possible.

Though most mothers are familiar with the value of cod liver oil and the danger of rickets, hospital authorities still report the finding of this disease in many infants where there has been neglect of the necessary precautions.

Rickets is a disease that should never be neglected. When overlooked, it leads to permanent changes in the bony structures of the body. Disabling deformities may result.

Though rickets is not a fatal disease it is a serious disturbance. It greatly undermines the health of the child and makes him more susceptible to infectious diseases. The child who has been a victim of rickets may develop "tetany," of which I have told you, and other serious constitutional disturbances.

"That isn't so!" you cry. "I've dozens; hundreds. All my life I've had to fear and fight people. I could talk all day telling about the people who've been mean to me — who've taken advantage of me—tried to hurt me."

Elsie Robinson

Yes, I suppose you could. And every word which you might tell me would be perfectly true. Yet, I repeat—

YOU HAVE ONLY ONE PERSON TO FEAR OR FIGHT—

THERE IS ONLY ONE PERSON WHO SPOILS YOUR HAPPINESS, PREVENTS YOUR SUCCESS, ROBS YOU OF POWER AND PEACE.

AND THAT PERSON IS—YOURSELF!

You, yourself, are the only person whom you need fear or fight.

Still you don't believe it.

But you can prove it for yourself—if you have the honesty and courage.

Think back. Think back to any incident in your life. To that row you had with your sister-in-law. To the time your best friend double-crossed you—skipped out and left you holding his bad note. To that swell job you lost. To those wretched years of muddled marriage. Put yourself back into that moment, into that misery, again. Now tell me truly—WHOSE FAULT WAS IT?

Instantly you answer, "It was the other person's fault!"

But was it?

Think again. Yes, we'll admit that the "other person" was malicious, dishonest, unfair, disloyal, thoroughly contemptible. But was THAT why you got into that mess?

No, it wasn't!

IT WASN'T THE CUSSEDNESS IN THE OTHER FELLOW THAT GOT YOU INTO THAT MESS. IT WAS SOME WEAKNESS IN YOURSELF.

Perhaps you were lazy or cowardly, trying to find a way out.

Or there may have been a score of different reasons—bad temper, fuzzy thinking, intolerance, envy, spite.

Whatever the reason, it was something in YOU, not something in the other fellow, which betrayed you into that situation.

AND THAT SAME TRAIT WILL BETRAY YOU CONTINUALLY INTO NEW AND WORSE MESSES, UNLESS AND UNTIL YOU WEED IT OUT.

Yes, I know; you don't want to admit it. It's hard to take.

YOU, YOURSELF, ARE THE ONLY ONE YOU NEED TO FEAR OR FIGHT.

But aren't there circumstances beyond any man's control.

There are. Poverty, corruption, injustice, man's brutality to man, accidents, illnesses, losses, catastrophes, death itself—all these circumstances are largely beyond our control.

BUT THE SPIRIT WITH WHICH WE MEET THESE THINGS ISN'T BEYOND OUR CONTROL.

We can't decide what will happen to us, but we can decide how we'll take it!

IF WE DON'T BETRAY OUR SELVES!

'HE'S MY MAN!' JEAN SAYS OF NEWEST LOVE

Hollywood, Sept. 19 (INS)—A six weeks' honeymoon in Mexico City was in prospect today for Jean Harlow, 22, platinum blonde film star, and Harold G. Rosson, 38, one of Hollywood's "ace" cameramen.

Married at 4.30 yesterday morning in Yuma, Ariz., after a thrilling midnight airplane elopement from Hollywood, they returned here and were in seclusion today in Miss Harlow's Georgian mansion.

"He is my man," Miss Harlow said.

"For years," said Rosson, "I have admired her. For months I have loved her. And now she is mine."

"And," they chorused, "we are happy. We will be happy always."

Miss Harlow said she hoped to accompany Rosson, next week, to Mexico City, where he will supervise the camera work on "Viva Villa," a picture starring Wallace Beery.

"I'm not in that picture, but I'll move Heaven and earth to accompany Hal to Mexico City. Later, we'll honeymoon in Honolulu," Miss Harlow said.

WANTED QUIET, GOT IT.

"We eloped," she explained, "because we wanted a quiet marriage without a lot of fuss and ado about it."

The romance that had its inception on a movie set, where Rosson was cameraman for the dazzling blonde, continued on the golf course, Miss Harlow revealed.

HOARDERS RUSH GOLD RETURN

Massachusetts gold hoarders, fearful of unfavorable publicity and of a $10,000 and a jail penalty up to 10 years, are rushing to exchange or report their holdings.

It is estimated $1,000,000 in gold is held by private owners.

Fifteen more days will be given for return of the gold, after which publicity and prosecutions will be started, according to U. S. Atty.-Gen. Homer Cummings.

Until the present belated rush, less than 100 returns had been filed at the Bureau of Internal Revenue in the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston.

Ellis G. Hult, assistant cashier there, said he felt sure several persons in each district would purposely fail to file returns on their gold holdings so as to test the validity of the president's order.

Nazis Ban Gentile Girls Dating Jews

Berlin, Sept. 19 (INS)—Beginning today, Christian girls in Germany must refrain from appearing publicly in the company of Jews.

This announcement was made in a scathing anti-Jewish speech before a monster mass meeting here by Walter Schuiz-Wershungen of the Nazi propaganda ministry, who declared:

"I have issued orders that in the future when a German girl is seen on the street with a Jew, that girl is going to get a thorough spanking.

"Of course, we consider Jews humans beings, but only second class ones.

"When an American visitor recently asked me why we don't want Jews to marry Aryans, I told him:

Holland Queen Hits Money Experiments

The Hague, Netherland, Sept. 19 (AP)—Queen Wilhelmina, in a speech from the throne, opening the winter session of the States General, declared today that "risky experiments in economic and monetary domains" must be avoided in measures for the improvement of trade.

"The crumbling away of our prosperity has lasted over a year and is exercising in a large degree an influence on the situation of the public finances, and it has disturbed the equilibrium between revenue and expenditures," the queen said.

Alien Teacher Wins Fight for Her Job

Bloomfield, Ct., Sept. 19 (INS)—Unless the board of education here chooses to disregard an overwhelming vote of a special town meeting last night, Miss Nellie Paget of Coldstream, New Brunswick, Can., an alien, appeared today to have won her fight for reappointment as a teacher in the local junior high school.

Debate raged for two hours, with school Supt. C. M. Larcomb leading the fight for the teacher. The vote was 272 to 126 for the teacher.

Vatican City, Sept. 19—The Pope, addressing 200 delegates to the International Advertising Congress at Rome who visited him, stressed the importance of good morals in publicity.

The subject advertised as well as the manner of its presentation, he said, should conform to the rules of truth and virtue.

Platinum Blonde Siren Finds Sophisticates Best Husbands

Jean Harlow, film beauty, eloped with Harold G. Rosson, 38, Hollywood cameraman, because she detests young husbands. Her first mate was 22. She was 16. She divorced him. Her second venture ended with husband Paul Bern's suicide. She flew to Yuma, Ariz., with her third choice Monday morning, without telling her friends, but, ever consistent, she married a man many years her senior. (International News Photo.)

Thoughts of Young Love Horrify Jean Harlow

(A bride at 16, divorced and married again at 21, widowed by Paul Bern's suicide last year, and now married for the third time at 22, Jean Harlow's exciting life and career throbs with drama. This is the second of a series in the interesting story of the platinum blonde's five years of limelight.

In her third surprising marriage, Jean Harlow revealed consistency. From this fact the prophets of Hollywood are juicing some, if scant, satisfaction today.

Those close friends in whom Jean failed to confide her intention to wed Harold G. Rosson, the crack film cameraman, were able to recall her avowal two years ago.

FIRST VENTURE AT 16

"My 'next' will be an older—much older—man," the blonde star declared. The occasion was the sealing by a divorce court of her realization that she was mismated to Charles F. McGrew, II, her first and wealthy young husband.

Her "next," within a year, was the tragic Paul Bern. He was 42, Jean was 21. And again a "next," Rosson, is 38. And now, while the "bless-you-darlings" are showering on the self-sufficient young star with her return to Hollywood and work, the inevitable comparisons between the three Harlow mates are being made.

Young McGrew was a few years Jean's senior, but Jean—as Miss Harlean Carpenter with a finishing school diploma tucked freshly under her arm, was just 18.

That adventure with matrimony was a breath-taking episode like the latest. Not an airplane elopement, nor a ceremony at dawn on the desert, but a startling match nevertheless.

There were no Hollywood chatterers bivouacked near the Lake Forrest campus with two eyes, two ears and an imagination on the alert for gossip, but there were Jean's classmates, all speculative about the "by-by-boy-friends" even as they planned their entrance the next September in one or another higher institution.

The bright girl-graduate didn't tell a friend. She "upped" and eloped. She had been a school-girl long enough. The next estate was that of bride.

CLICKS BEFORE CAMERA

That graduation, and that elopement proved the key to Hollywood. McGrew agreed with his blonde young wife that California would be "interesting." They made the trip, and set-up in a beautiful home with rounds of entertainment attracting a group of young camp-followers.

Jean was an instant "non-professional" success. Her companions were girls and boys of the film colony. It wasn't long before those lavish compliments so generic to the locale had an effect.

"I'm bored with listening to what I could do in the pictures," Jean told a group one day. "I'm going to try it out."

Jean, however, didn't tell her husband, nor Grandfather Carpenter in Kansas City, of her intention to take a test. When it was an instant hit, and she won a contract with Hal Roach comedies, she told her husband. Who immediately raised a rumpus.

GRANDPA LES HALT

Grandpa Carpenter (I'd get a hint of his favored descendant's new activities when he saw her wraith scamper across a silver sheet in revealing black teddies.

Jean's career came to a summary end. Her grandsire communicated at once with her mother. In spite of her young husband's purported wealth, neither the budding film actress nor her mother thought it wise to incur a wrathful grandfather's further ire.

Jean sought and won a release from the Roach contract, and she made a trip to Kansas City. But she had formed a liking for California, and McGrew thought it the place for a permanent home.

FIRST LOVE EXPLODES

The McGrew romance went definitely on the rocks not long thereafter. Part of the fault lay with Jean's determination to re-enter pictures. Another side was Jean's allegations that her young husband was a difficult proposition as a helpmate.

In October, 1930, the crash came. Jean filed suit for divorce. She charged excessive drunkenness and cruelty. McGrew threw glasses and bottles and furniture at her once, the young wife alleged. Although McGrew contested the action, charging that Jean had been indiscreetly a model for a cameraman in that she exhibited too much of her lithe young body for the lens, Jean eventually won a divorce.

GETS BET WITH CLARA

Jean's chance in pictures came quickly. She accepted a small part in support of Clara Bow in "The Saturday Night Kid." Then the lucky absence of another blonde beauty, Greta Nissen, gave her the big chance and success.

Miss Nissen had been featured in the silent "shooting" of the air-extravaganza "Hell's Angels." Under the impetus of Howard Hughes' first plunge with his millions into pictures, "Hell's Angels" had Hollywood gasping as the most expensive, most epic-al epic yet attempted.

More than half the picture had been "shot" as a silent. The scenes in which Miss Nissen appeared had been completed. Now it was decided that "Hell's Angels" or any other epic as a "silent" just would not do.

GORGEOUS AS SIREN

They began to wire the air-film for sound. Two actors who liked Miss Harlow, Ben Lyon and James Hall, told Hughes of the striking blonde whose hair was sheen of a different shade—platinum like.

Beautiful? Gorgeous. Figure? Superb. Talent? Well—Jean was hustled to the Hughes lot for a test, and she passed.

The next sight Grandpa Carpenter gained of his beautiful granddaughter in the shadow was as she reclined on a divan with her arms outstretched to a soldier.

The picture made Harlow. She became the most "in-demand" girl of her type in the business. And that type, the producers via the public decided, was the siren. The heartless beauty who done men wrong. Pre-Mae West, of course. That was the Jean-to-be from "Hell's Angels" on through a career of toil, romance, tragedy—until now.

NEW JORDAN MARSH SHOP

JORDAN'S NEW ACCESSORY SHOP.

A new accessory shop, emphasizing the current vogue for matching accessories, has just opened on Jordan Marsh Company's street floor. Here not only matching colors but matching fabrics are featured.

The shop itself is modernistic in design and is constructed of maple, contrasted with walnut. The indirect method of lighting was selected to display the new fashions the more effectively.

At the opening, a new fabric, "velvet faille" was introduced and the accessory ensemble included hat, bag, jacket, gloves, scarf, belt and flower. It is planned to present, through the accessory shop, new ideas, new fabrics, new color contrasts . . . in short, high fashions in accessories.

YOU DIDN'T ATTEND THE OPENING OF Music in the Air last night? Why everybody goes to a Kern and Hammerstein musical adventure . . . and this one is gayer, brighter, more tuneful and romantic than ever . . .!

Free from gaudy stage sets, from American bars and 14th Street peep shows, sweet romance goes on a spree . . . the let's-all-go-back-to-the-good-old-forget - me - nots - and - innocence-days-and capture-the-scent-of-mountain-air-before-it-is - snatched - away-forever spirit is revived . . . with the gayer-more-fashionable-subtler - sex-allure for contrast . . . very cleverly and delightfully woven around Jerome Kern's beautiful melodies . . .

MRS. M. B. FRENCH

Debutantes and those of another season flocked in with their escorts . . . fashionable Beacon Hill turned out in last season's frocks . . . waiting no doubt before ordering new ones to see if these amusing and outlandish modes which are now decorating the shopping thoroughfares are really going to be WORN . . . a theater premiere a month from now will be indeed a treat if Dame Boston decides to get Mae West conscious . . .

The curtain arose on time . . . Heaven knows it would be nice if the theatres would adopt either one policy or the other, of opening on time or late as usual . . . it is difficult to get a glimpse of the brilliant audience as they trip down a darkened aisle . . . and they always trip. We do like to feast our eyes on the Fair Things . . . and catch a sly look as to whom they have on their line . . .

Beautiful Deborah Hall, a blossom of another day and still blooming, was squired by good-looking John Willis . . . Miss Hall has caught the charm of appearing to be always enjoying her part in life and infecting others with it . . .

Back from the land of sunshine and movie stars, Lydia Fuller and Robert (Lampoon) Henderson enjoyed the show . . . Mr. and Mrs. Fuller were in the background looking very refreshed after their journey to California and the Century of Progress Fair en route . . . We were bursting to ask whether or no the ambitious Lydia received a movie contract while in the Golden West . . . she certainly was stunning in a severe black satin sheath gown with jabot of white satin . . .

Mrs. Fuller in Black and White Silk

MRS. FULLER WORE A FLOWERED BLACK AND white silk and we reflected upon the simplicity of Americans who can afford the most elegant and luxurious things in life and who are natural enough to drop into Schrafft's after the show for a delicious chocolate ice-cream soda . . . as we observed them later.

Very distingue was Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth with her young sons . . . joined in the lobby by the attractive Mrs. Harvey Bundy and her several sons . . . a jolly family group. Mrs. Wadsworth wore a lovely white shawl embroidered in black, perfect for a summer evening wrap and Mrs. Bundy was in natty sports attire in the brown and yellow tones . . .

Veteran first-nighters are the Bradley-Frenchs . . . the charming president of the Charlotte Cushman Club wore the so fashionable black lace and pearls necklace . . . by the way, have you heard that a generous and theater-loving donor has recently presented Mrs. French with a check for the purpose of raising the mortgage of the Cushman Club. We hail the spirit of eternal giving in a time like this . . . and believe it or don't she is being hailed by an expert.

All of a twitter . . . we mean, simply delighted to be out late and with her boy friends was Marian Moffat, a dainty little miss who is taking the social apotlight this season and very lovely she was in red and black satin gown accentuating her blonde tresses . . . dark-eyed Rosamond Lockwood who resembles Kay Francis, the movie actress, we think and we hope she likes it . . . pretty Helen Richmond in a sweet garden-flower print with Peter Wentworth, Carlton Richmond and Charles Brooks . . . Miss Lockwood and Miss Richmond were popular debs of last season . . .

Mrs. Charles Innes in Sable Satin

MANY SMART BLACK FROCKS WERE SEEN . . . Mrs. Charles Innes was smart in the sable satin with a touch of white . . . her hat was of black velvet and very becoming.

Another bud of last season, Frances Poinier of Winchester, wore blue as she came down the aisle with her boy friend . . . and True to her sables, Mrs. Channing Wells looked very beautiful after her busy summer at Wianno . . . you know, she announced her daughter Elizabeth's engagement last month and that (if you know anything about such matters) is enough to ruin one's game of contract and send you to the beauticians for a season . . . and speaking of our announcement, we reported that the beautiful Betty Wells schooled at Oldfields, which was a mistake; she attended Westover and was one of the most popular girls in her class.

Janice Vaughan Smith Weds Today

WE EXPECT TO SEE MRS. WELLS and her party at the gala opening of the Russian Bear on Wednesday night when Blanche Yurka and many other celebrities are expected to enjoy the innovation of a Russian cabaret in this town before and after the theater . . .

Marjorie English

Music had charms to lure the stately Elizabeth Sawyer to the play last night and Mrs. Theodore Frothingham was noted in the throng . . . Very nifty evening!

Janice Vaughan Smith is being married in London today to Douglas Little of Surrey, England, and the City of Brotherly Love, Pa.

Marjorie English (than whom no debutante of this season has a more gracious mother, Mrs. Edward English, is calling a meeting of her Junior committee for a series of social activities on Friday afternoon at her home in Milton to discuss plans for this season to aid the philanthropic work of the St. Monica's Home . . . assisting her are Susan Dalton, Tartaa Ferguson, Rose Loring, Laura Robbins, Jane Dexter, Larbara Coffin, Laura Dodge, Katherine Balch, Hetty Richardson, Mary Sheldon, and Mrs. C. MARIAN MOFFATT — CHARLES BROOKS — ROSAMOND LOCKWOOD — PETER WENTWORTH — HELEN RICHMOND — CARLTON RICHMOND

SOCIETY, YOUNG AND OLD, attended the premiere of "Music in the Air" at the Colonial last night and in the audience were many debutantes. In group, snapped in the lobby, you see Miss Marian Moffatt, debutante of the new season, wearing a red and black satin gown. With her were Miss Rosamond Lockwood and Miss Helen Richmond, who wore a garden flower print. Their escorts were the Messrs. Peter Wentworth, Carlton Richmond and Charles Brooks. Many dinner parties preceded the show. (Boston American photo.)

'the social whirl' . . . . .

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

AMATEUR DRAMATICS HAVE HAD FULL SWAY this season. An enterprising group at Plymouth produced Noel Coward's famous "Hay Fever" with great success on both Friday and Saturday evenings at "The Forges" Casino.

Miss Anne Harlow with her golden hair brushed back, wore a midnight blue evening gown with silver sequins and cleverly impersonated the temperamental Myra.

Rodman Hussey cleverly took the part of the eccentric David, Katherine Davis, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Harry Davis, played "Jackie," ingenue and with her golden hair, wide blue eyes and simple little green checked gingham with a low back and becoming neckline, was apt for the part. Frederick Churchill was Sandy and Miss Florence Probst of Long Pond and New York appeared ravishingly lovely as Sorrel in a gorgeous white satin evening gown with huge sleeves of black and white ostrich feathers. Miss Probst is the Norma Shearer type with expressive eyes, a fascinating slow smile, and chestnut curly hair. Miss Rose Briggs, niece of Dean LeBaron Briggs, who is a very clever actress, took the part of the maid. Miss Gretchen Mayher, tall and statuesque in a gorgeous black and gold evening creation, impersonated Mrs. Bliss.

David I. Saurer of Hanover coached the play and Frank Holmes was manager and stage director.

Among the audience were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hornblower, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Gurnett, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Greenwood, Mrs. Samuel Adams of Commonwealth ave., Boston, Mrs. Robert Symington of New York.

Miss Jane Strickland wore a black georgette evening gown with white ruffle sleeves and organdy flare at the neck.

New Sport Caps

THERE IS A NEW NOTE creeping into the sports hats worn by the fashionables—fitted saucy little woolen caps with huge pom-poms in all bright shades. They are worn cocked over one eye and showing pleaty of the coiffeur.

Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge of Manchester wears one with a neat fitting dark tweed outfit. The cap is bright orange and adds such a vivid touch.

Mrs. Dudley Fickman, Jr., one of the social luminaries who is particularly well dressed this autumn, tells us that the success of her smart wardrobe is building about one smart shade that is particularly becoming to her. Mrs. Fickman has chosen the new shade of brown for her fall ensemble and has just added a neatly tailored brown woolen morning frock with white piqué trimmings. piqué is going to persist and it is all to the good.

Mrs. Harcourt Armour, another well garbed society matron, is wearing an eel grey ensemble with one of the new shine satin hats dipped over one eye in a rakish but smart manner. Mrs. Armour believes that the tilt of the hat is all important to the chic of the costume and exemplifies it in the way she wears that brimmed "chapeau" of navy blue with the Scotch tweed jacket showing the new cape effect and the military and very trig high buttoned collar.

Return Home

MRS. EVERETT PERVERE of Clyde st. is returning to her winter home from a season at Cohasset spent with her mother, Mrs. Harry Cumner. Her daughter, Miss Martha, is a pupil of the Beaver Country Day School.

Miss Dana Bowling is again opening her school of the Dance at her lovely new studio at 5 Otis pl. She is a successor to the Isadora Duncan-Denishawn School.

Mrs. Edith Long Sawtelle of Plymouth has just sent out announcement cards of her marriage to John Graham Cleary.

Mrs. Frederick Collins who with her husband has spent an interesting summer in Hollywood writing for the movies, and lately has been visiting on the North Shore, is wearing much brown.

Mrs. Benjamin Thorndyke of Dedham has returned from her gay and festive summer at Nahant. She is a tennis enthusiast and followed the Longwood tournaments assiduously.

Mrs. Edward Rudd (nee Isabella Boardman) is an up and coming young social matron. She and her sister, Mrs. William Potter of Marblehead, gave a gorgeous costume ball not long ago and attended in every detail themselves—and was the party a success!

Mrs. F. E. Snow Is Hostess at Meeting

THE first fall meeting of the officers and advisors of the Harriet Tubman House will be held at the home of Mrs. Frederick E. Snow, 117 Bay State rd., Boston, on Wednesday, at 3 o'clock.

The Harriet Tubman House is a charitable organization founded for the purpose of providing a home for colored students and working girls. One of the outstanding social affairs of the early fall season will be the Fiesta Fantastique number three at the Copley-Plaza on Oct. 13 and 14, the proceeds of which will benefit the Harriet Tubman House. The dancing team of Dreselle and Lenardo, famous on the European continent for their original performances, has been engaged for these two evenings, to entertain the patrons of the Fiesta Don Corie, the director, plans to make this Fiesta the most elaborate production he has staged in this country.

WELL EQUIPPED DRESSING TABLE IS WELCOMED BY STRANGER WITHIN YOUR GATES

Sterling Silver, Rock Crystal Help Brighten Up Our Lives These Days

By Charline Davenport

COSTUME, jewelry and kitchen parties are all very good in their place, but it is with three cheers and a loud hurrah we learn, on excellent authority, that the bank vaults are being emptied of their treasure and social life will be put on a "party" basis once again.

Remember when flowers, candles, beautiful silver, service plates, monogrammed linen, beautifully gowned women, gentlemen in evening clothes—made a dinner party an event rather than a necessary affair of food?

Or is that such past history we can't again get into the stride of important social functions?

Just Pride

Our social fabric is stronger and better with trimmings, gold—solid gold trimmings that go with it. There should be a just pride in owning the precious and beautiful things that are at hand.

My enthusiasm and longing for luxury must not be confined to a few of us. Everybody should have a share of the better things. Flowers—the garden variety have made many a humble cottage a paradise indeed—and in that same cottage a half dozen sterling spoons probably are enjoyed, treasured sincerely and made more of "at tea time" than the most elaborate tea service on Park Avenue.

Since it is now the fashion to again bring forth the family jewels—the jeweler's art is reviving with this stimulation and creating the loveliest things imaginable—delicate pins and glorious rings, bracelets that may bring Cleopatra back to our midst bemoaning the fact that she couldn't be one of the twentieth centuriers.

So let us join the parade to the linen closet and the silver vaults, take the double damask from its blue paper, shine up the silver until it glistens and send out invitations to all those people we have been meaning to entertain and were too occupied with new ways of cooking hamburger steak—to do it.

Social Wheel

First thing you know the social wheel will again go round on its own momentum. There will be important gowns in the wardrobe for the important occasions and tea gowns for the informal afternoon at home.

The return of the trailing tea gown is another gesture toward the art of living comfortably, delightfully, exquisitely.

When winter comes and the logs are blazing merrily on the hearth—could anything be "nearer what the heart desires" than to return from the shopping trip, remove the tweeds, don the tea gown, ring for tea, curl up in front of the fire, and beam?

If friends drop in for a chat, all the better. There are hostesses who always have extra tea service at their elbows so they can say, "One lump or two"—without any more effort than that.

As we said before, we think life is going to be vastly more agreeable to all of us as we shine up our social amenities and go about grandly once again.

MRS. WILLIAM MASON GROSVENOR, JR.

Perhaps you know Mrs. Grosvenor, Jr., as Miss Rose Hobart, the clever young actress who stepped from the stage to the screen when Janet Gaynor had a fit of temperament over "Lilliom." Miss Hobart wears her hair in the new "Girl in the Wind" bob which is exceedingly becoming to her. The bangs are not set, but look attractively elfine.

Brilliance of Satin in Gloves and Bag for Accessories

VERY SUBTLE and very very smart is this contrast of shining black satin accessories with the new black wool suits.

In the accompanying illustration we show you, also, a new black fox scarf that repeats this bright thought. Not an average or ordinary scarf by any means, is this one! It is made like an Eton jacket, if you please, and you slip your arms into it and run for the 11:15 and the luncheon engagement without fear of losing it on the way.

Although the black satin gloves were a thought of the moment originated especially to tone up this black and yet some more black season, they will probably be with us for ever after. We are so curious as to their next step in the fashion picture that we can hardly wait for the southern fashions to present themselves and see if satin gloves will come out in all their glory in pastels.

There is one thing about satin gloves, however, we have to acknowledge. They are not the thing to wear in the morning. Very definitely they have captured that "I am dressed up" look—which we like and need.

A diamond bracelet is very becoming to them. Two diamond bracelets—or three, in the evening are vastly more becoming to them—and that brings us to the point that there will be as many black satin gloves worn with the formal gowns this winter, as the classic kid.

And now we come to the satin hand bag that goes so well with the gloves. Depending upon its fabric for its "place in the sun" it is simply designed with just one small brilliant clasp to glorify it.

The hat—one with a brim for the women who will not beret this winter—is rather perfect for a from noon to night hat. Tilted over the eye just enough to give it grace, and with its satin bands to show harmony of thought with the gloves and the bag—it completes this ensemble of bright and dull effects.

What Ho! You Must Have a Cavalier Plume

By Annice Brink

YOU MAY be the frankest little soul on eath, without the least bit of siren about your person and a pug nose and round button eyes to boot, so that you can wear a beret until you're sixty and still remind everyone of a high school freshman.

But there will come a time, mark our words, when one glance up-flung from the shelter of a hat brim is worth a million of the direct and less subtle variety that goes with a beret. And to this worthy cause of adding allure where allure is needed, the velvet hat with cavalier plume set high over the left ear is dedicated with much relish by us.

The crown is very shallow, so that your coiffure of sculpture curls or just plain baby curls will show almost to the top of the head. Then to put it on properly you should carry in your mind's eye a picture of the courtly cavalier of Queen Elizabeth's day—and place the hat very much on the right side of the head, eclipsing the right eye.

Plumes and rakish tilt did not disturb the gentleman's marksmanship with his sword; he could reach the heart with its keen point when he had to. Ah, well! See what we mean? Plumes, the rakish tilt, the sword of allure, and the heart you want to reach, for which you've temporarily deserted the beret . . .

We'll tell you where to buy the velvet hat with the cavalier plume, if you'll just send the Fashion Editor a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston, with your request.

Fine Desserts for Old and Young

By MARTHA LEE

THE ENGLISH NURSERY, where all meals are served until the youngsters are old enough to graduate to full adult fare, certainly divorces the English mother from the problem of how to substitute wholesome, easily digested desserts from the more elaborate ones designed to intrigue adult palates.

The answer for the American mother seems to be to try to find desserts appetizing enough to please Daddy and wholesome enough for the children. And it's not easy.

We have two desserts for you today, however, that we think will meet the approval of all ages.

Junior Custard

4 tbsps. sugar
1 tbsp. cornstarch
¼ tsp. salt
1 egg or 2 yolks
2 cups scalded milk
½ tsp. vanilla.

Mix sugar, cornstarch and salt; add egg slightly beaten. Pour in scalded milk, stirring constantly. Cook in double boiler until thick enough to coat the spoon. Cool, flavor and top with whipped cream and diced banana.

Banana and Apple Brown Betty

3 cups bread
3 tbsps. butter
2 apples
3 bananas
¾ cup sugar
½ tsp. cinnamon.

Cut bread into dice and saute with butter until brown. Peal apples and bananas, cut very thin. Dredge with sugar mixed with cinnamon. Cover bottom of baking dish with the bread, then add fruit and remaining bread in alternate layers, saving a few of the crumbs to put on top. Bake one-half hour, covered, and the last 15 minutes uncovered, in a moderate oven, 375 deg F.

The Marry-Go-Round

When Love Checks Out

By HELEN ROWLAND

THIS IS the season of reckoning when a girl prepares to check up on her summer flirtations and a man prepares to check out of his.

Helen Rowland

* * *

There are few feminine bigamists, says Reno Ruth, because even a much-marrying woman prefers her husbands one at a time; but there is probably no man living who doesn't secretly envy and admire King Solomon's co-operative idea.

* * *

The honeymoon has set in the west, when the bridegroom stops saying, "What is that delicious perfume?"—and begins saying "What did you pay for that STUFF?"

* * *

Mrs. Solomon says: Go to. A woman resembleth a dog which is full of thankfulness for whatsoever kindness it receiveth. But a man is like unto a cat, in whom there is no remembrance of past favors. And the cry in his heart is always, "Next!"

* * *

The only stop-signal an attractive man receives these days appears to be the one he gets from the traffic lights.

* * *

Bo-Beep's diary: Lay late this morning, wondering why my husband, poor wretch, does continue to quote me the opinions of that doctor who declares that a woman's "nervous troubles" are all in her imagination. Methinks he is giving many husbands a bum steer, which may lead them to a quick and early death by shooting. NO MAN can rob a woman of her "nerves" with safety!

* * *

A woman is middle-aged if she can remember when the head waiter used to lean over and inform her coldly that "ladies are not permitted to smoke here."

* * *

It is a woman's heart and vanity, not her senses that are weak. Sex, without romance, love and tenderness, has very little appeal for the average woman.

* * *

Daily Suggestion for Self Improvement

DO YOU drink your eight glasses of water every day? If not—you should start this little habit this minute. Some say, "drink with meals" . . . some say, "Goodness NO, don't drink with your meals," but whether you do or you don't, those eight glasses should be consumed every 24 hours.

If you need an inspiration to keep you on this course, let us tell you that one of the benefits you will derive from it will be a better complexion. Or, if you are practical enough to be satisfied with the fact that it is good for you—very necessary, in fact, for health's sweet sake to have your eight sparkling glasses of pure, fresh and not too cold—every day and seven days a week, let that be sufficient.

Bridging It—What I've Heard

By Barbara Hagen-Burger

THE BRIDGE season for Boston and vicinity looks decidedly "fair and warmer"—quite likely Hot in spots with a few showers later and possibly hurricanes localized in their favorite haunts, namely the small rooms with the charge account games . . .

Rumor has it that a new Bridge Club will open this week in the Robert Treat Paine house on Commonwealth avenue—55 is the number to be exact—this is to be managed and directed by "the boy from Maine" who has accumulated so much of the prized silver plate offered at tourneys around Boston. Wondering what in the bridge world he was doing about all this we discovered he spent the past year in the kitchen making candy. Here's hoping he will not continue to lose money by not playing the game himself.

* * *

Just a thoroughly good place to be is the Boston Chess Club—what with Eleanor Bancroft and Roger Nesbitt, it's good for your bridge and good for your spirit. Not so surprising is the news that they have increased their membership to 136 this Fall in spite of the temperamental elevator which sends the prospective gamesters through a maze of alleys to be transported as so much freight on the lift at the rear of the building—

* * *

Now for a bit of a story on one of the most popular and brilliant members—"the Oswald Jacoby" of New England. "Congratulation on his election as president of the Plumber Union" was the message he received a la Western Union, before leaving the tables the other evening. Otherwise known as the official scorekeeper of the Chess Club his usually profitable psychic missed its target to profit the opponents this time some 2000 points—and I agree with the partner that it's news worth a "flash" when Tash pulls a faux pas like this—

Family Spirit took a bow on the last Metropolitan Theater tournament when Mr. Mark Noble and his brother decorated their mantels with the Section A trophy cups and Mr. W. C. Holmes and Son theirs with the trophies of Section Three.

A salute to Mrs. George Winchester and Mrs. Smma Hannell, Top Scorers in Friday's Open Duplicate for giving some of the adventurous young bloods a cause to stop and think what conservation and conservatism can do in this grand game. Practice has begun for the Fall Tournament which opens early in October and is to be conducted in an entirely new and different manner.

* * *

They do say that the reason for some of Bostons better bridge consciences sulking around draped in black was the passing of the Old Whist Club at its Commonwealth avenue residence—cause unknown.

For you Bridgers who are just returning to the city after enjoyable summer vacations there is much gossip saved up and so—more of it later.

Etiquette of Using Fork With Either Right or Left Hand

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please settle this question for us: My husband says that it doesn't matter if you eat with both knife and fork. I told him that after he cuts a piece of meat he should change his fork to the right hand and lay the knife down on the plate. Tell us which is the proper way, please. G.

Either way is proper, the fork-shifting way of eating, or the non-fork-shifting way. If your husband prefers the non-fork-shifting way, he's right to choose it.

Marrying a Widower

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A friend of mine is going to marry a widower with one child. Is it proper for her to wear a white dress and a veil? Wouldn't it be better if she wore a light-colored dress with a hat? Also, what color would you suggest? W.

If this is the first marriage of your friend, there is no reason why she should not wear the traditional white dress and wedding veil of a bride. I take it from your letter that you think she should adapt her costume to the fact that the bridegroom has been married before. This is not necessary. Let her have all the joy of wearing the traditional bridal costume, if she wishes. Of course, if she prefers to wear a dress of some becoming light shade, that would be correct, too.

Pleasant to Have Individual Powder Puffs and a Stock of Cleansing Tissues

By Therese Deschamps

UP THREE degrees in anybody's estimation—goes the hostess who, in the first place, has a dressing table where there is a good light and in the second place has that dressing table equipped with all those little this's and that's every woman needs before making her appearance in the drawing room.

Individual powder puffs are now so efficient that they have powder on them—so there is no dabbing into a community powder box—or boxes.

Rouge goes on with cotton pads which are then discarded—three or four come in their neat paper covers are not as extravagant as they sound at first glance—the combs can be cleansed and kept in use for months—and seasons if need be.

Place of Honor

Creams—two or three kinds in tubes should have a place of honor on the dressing table and a HUGE supply of paper tissues, the finest and nicest to be bought. Display them prominently so the fate of the hand embroidered guest towels is not . . . smudges of rouge and lipstick.

It would be perfectly all right to shoot woman guests who are so impolite as to violate the immaculate white of a linen towel in this careless fashion—but whether it be through lack of thought or training it is done—even today.

As one can't hang a sign near the towels and say "Please use tissues for removing makeup," the next best thing is to move the tissues to a spot where all and sundry have to stumble over them.

Hairpins and safety pins should be present along with the powder, rouges and lipsticks—and even a small sewing kit is not amiss.

Little boudoir rooms with long mirrors as well as the dressing table and all its accoutrements are fast becoming part of every home where entertaining is a custom and a pride.

Guest Room and Bath

The guest room and bath are still other things to consider. For these one can run wild in the toilet goods departments and have all kinds of everything for the man as well as the woman. Which reminds me of a very charming house in the South where I visited, I wanted to stay in the guest suite for days and—never wanted to come out.

There were bath salts, smelling salts, tooth pastes, even tooth brushes in celophane—face powders, bath powders in several shades and perfumes, soaps for those who wanted them French and those who wanted the English—eye brow pencils and massage cream—little wonder I was complimented on my appearance after giving everything a fair trial.

And from that comfortable sojourn I have brought back two or three suggestions which even a modest guest room can boast. If you want the names of these, please send a self-addressed stamped envelop with your request to Therese Deschamps, Boston Evening American.

Beauty Questions and Answers

Personality Bob

Question: Hearing so much about the new personality bobs I went to—and had one. But I really don't think this is so becoming to me. My face is long and thin and I'm not very tall, only 5 ft. 1 in. With a short haircut, the picture I make is anything but attractive, at least from my viewpoint. What do you think about this?—Miss V. A., Salem.

Answer: Anything that is not becoming, regardless of how new a mode it is, is never stylish. Let your hair grow until it can be cut differently. Arrange your coiffure in wide, natural waves, fluffing it about the face.

* * *

For Thin Neck

Question: Will you kindly advise me on the following: (1) What exercises and form of massage are best for keeping one's neck youthful looking? Also, what kind of skin cream would you suggest for the neck and when to apply same? (2) What is meant by a "nourishing cream." M. M. C., Boston.

Answer: We have a set of exercises that will prove of benefit in keeping the flesh from sagging on the neck. This followed by a good muscle oil or nourishing cream will keep the skin lubricated. A nourishing cream is one that supplies the necessary oils the skin lacks.

* * *

Bleaching Hair

Question: Is there any preparation that will lighten the hair on the face and arms?—Miss J. L., Newton.

Answer: Yes, there is a very good preparation for lightening hair. If you'll write in, repeating your request, and enclose a self addressed stamped envelope, we'll be very glad to forward the name of this to you.

* * *

For Thin Arms

Question: My arms are so thin and bony that I'm ashamed to wear a short-sleeved dress. And as for my elbows, the skin is hard and flaky and the bones look as though they were coming out any moment.—Mrs. M. A., Brookline.

Answer: The only way to build muscle and tissue on any particular part of the body is through exercise and massage. Do some good exercises entailing the use of the arms night and morning. And we mean do them not just go through the motions of doing them. Apply a rich cream to the arms and massage with a circular and penetrating motion. Leave "gobs" of this rich cream on all night and rinse off in the morning first with tepid and then cold water. If followed faithfully, you should notice an improvement in a short time.

* * *

Fair Skin

Question: I have golden-red hair, light brown eyes and my skin is fair. What shades should I use in rouge, powder, lipstick and eye shadow? Also a good freckle bleach.—Miss S. G., Dorchester.

Answer: Natural or rachel powder, Red Geranium or Red Poppy rouge and lipstick and green Eyeshadow. Some cosmeticians have a special powder on the market for skins that are freckled. We'll gladly mail this to you if you'll send in for it.

* * *

"Moon" Face

Question: I have a very round "moon" face. Can you give me some make-up hints that will give my face the illusion of length.—D. O., Beverly.

Answer: Rouge should always be applied in triangular fashion—so that it can be shaded. A round face needs very little rouge. Shade it over the cheek-bones only, and then apply a daub on the chin to lengthen it out a bit. When you have completed your make-up, all the lines should curve upward.

PANDORA TELLS YOU

DEAR PANDORA:

I am engaged to a grand girl and wouldn't give her up for anything—except canaries. She has six canaries in six cages all over her house, one in the living room, one in the library, one in the dining room and three in her bedroom. She adores canaries but so far as I am concerned canaries are a lot of bunk, especially in a bedroom, letting out squawks while one is trying to sleep.

I told her I was willing to have canaries in the living room and in the library and in the dining room and in the kitchen, but so far as I am concerned there will be no canaries in the master's chamber. She says there will be canaries in the master's chamber or there will be no wife in the master's chamber after the November wedding.

It seems to me that if I give in on this we will not only have canaries in the bedroom for the rest of our lives but my capitulation will establish a bad precedent for future arguments. Should I give in and suffer the canaries, pretend to relent and toss them out after we get settled down, or stand fast for a birdless bedroom? L. L.

* * *

Don't let her give you the bird—or the birds. A he-man is altogether too likely to be affected by a constant twittering with the result that even the sound of a bill rasping on cuttle-fish will make him so nervous he could literally fly.

You know very well that salt has long been used for catching the unwary birdling. Now sir, you seem to me the salt of the earth but don't let anyone tame you with condiments. Assert yourself. Don't be a weasel in the master's chamber.

STRAW VOTING FOR MAYOR IS UNDER WAY

The balloting is about to begin.

The registered Democratic voters of Boston—there are 161,000 of them—will settle the question to their own satisfaction:

"Who is the strongest Democratic candidate for Mayor of Boston?"

This they will do through the secret Straw Ballot Test Election conducted by the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser.

The dramatic, important and much-muddied campaign for Mayor has been enlivened and further complicated by the entry of new candidates into the field.

Senator Parkman, Republican, and William A. Reilly, chairman of the School Committee.

The time for filing of candidates will expire next Tuesday.

The Straw Ballots of the Evening American and Sunday Advertiser will enable the registered Democratic voters to record their own sentiment for the Democratic candidate of their choice.

The names of eight Democratic candidates appear upon the straw ballots now printed.

$750,000 FIRE IN HALIFAX

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 19 (AP)—Flames that defied all-night efforts of firemen today burst through the roof of Halifax Commission's Pier No. 2 and enveloped the entire upper level of the 1200-foot structure.

Accurate estimate of damage was impossible because of clouds of smoke, but commission officials said it would total about $750,000. The pier was built at a cost of $1,250,000 just before the World War.

Three firemen were rushed to a hospital, one in a critical condition from injuries suffered in an 18-foot tumble from a loading chute. Two liners were taken from the pier to escape the fire.

Authorities feared explosions from the $300,000 stacks of bags of flour, comprising almost the entire new seasonal shipment for Halifax district.

Commenting on Mr. Hearst's thorough grasp of the situation and the excellent ideas advocated, Weatherbee said:

"The exposition of current financial problems is of great interest to everyone, including bankers, and of exceptional interest was Mr. Hearst's characteristically keen analysis of the present situation and its potentialities.

"No one can deny that economic theory is subject to change and the ultimate goal is the consolidation of proved and experienced practice with the intelligently conceived changes necessitated by the recognized advancement in our social order."

Hearst Reflation Plan Praised at Columbia

New York, Sept. 19 (INS).—Measures advocated by William Randolph Hearst in his address Saturday night would lead toward industrial recovery, Dr. Walter Rautenstrauch, head of the Department of Industrial Engineering at Columbia University, asserted today. He said:

"Mr. Hearst's views on controlled inflation were presented very clearly. A system of controlled inflation must be dependent upon accurate statistical information.

"If Mr. Hearst's proposals were well executed—preferably on the Swedish system—they would generally tend to stabilize business conditions and be a contributing factor toward industrial recovery."

CARRIES ALL-BRAN ON EVERY VOYAGE

Seaman Finds This Delicious Cereal Relieves Constipation

Here is an unsolicited letter from Mr. Darrach.

"I have been going to sea for the past fourteen years. Every trip, I underwent severe headaches, nervousness, and sleeplessness. Tried all sorts of remedies, and received only temporary relief.

"So hearing about Kellogg's ALL-BRAN thought I would get a box, which I did. That was six months ago, haven't been without it at home, and when I go to sea a box of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is always with me."—George D. Darragh, 1914 22nd Avenue, Oakland, California.

Tests show ALL-BRAN contains two things for common constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also supplies iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

How much pleasanter this is than taking pills and drugs—so often harmful. Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily will correct most types of constipation. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve as a cereal or use in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

"SPEND A DOLLAR AND MAKE A JOB"

BOSTON AMERICAN

"BUY IN SEPTEMBER AND BUY AMERICAN"

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN New England's Greatest Evening Newspaper TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1933

★

This is the tenth illustrated editorial—of a series now appearing in the Hearst Newspapers—on the importance of the Buy Now movement as a contribution to National Recovery.

★

"My Dad's helping the PRESIDENT!"

You can help too—by buying Now the things that you need . . .

THEY LIVE IN AN AVERAGE HOUSE on an average street—just an average American family. They have an average income—a little money in the savings bank—a small margin left over from the pay-check when the month's bills are paid.

Those are obviously new trousers he is wearing. That's a new belt, too. The shirt is one of half a dozen his mother has just bought. Even the necktie is one he hasn't worn before.

You can see he likes new clothes—he's as anxious to put on a good appearance as any grown-up. But that's not what this boy is proud of. He's proud of the idea back of these new purchases. He knows why they were made at the present time.

His Dad is helping the President! What boy wouldn't be proud of that?

Maybe you don't see the connection. Maybe you wonder what interest President Roosevelt has in a boy's new long trousers, shirt, belt and necktie.

Right now he has a lot of interest. Because these purchases show that his plans for Recovery are working.

The merchant who sold those things—the manufacturers who made them—have joined President Roosevelt's "partnership" between business and government.

At his request—they have shortened hours, raised wages, added new help. In the face of losses through many months past—in spite of a lower business volume—they have added to their overhead, increased their chance of loss, because the President asked it.

It was a big gamble. Much depended on how quickly and widely people started to buy. These businesses had no magical reserve to draw on.

That's why every father like this boy's dad—every mother like his mother—is helping the President—helping the country—when they go out to buy.

They help because the money they spend enables the merchant and the manufacturer to pay the extra help they have taken on. The money they spend now helps to pay for the goods the merchant bought—and for new goods he must order.

The few dollars that went on to this boy's back—multiplied by the millions of other boys like him—means enough new cash in circulation to keep a large part of our re-employed men on the job and off the relief list.

You can help the President, too. You can help yourself as well. Every bit of buying you do now in September helps speed up Recovery. Every dollar you spend this month—helps you to live better.

So start helping the President today. There is a simple, easy way to do this.

Figure out the things you need and can afford. Coal for the cellar, provisions for the kitchen pantry, clothes for the kids, new shoes or suits or hats for yourself—it isn't what you buy that counts, but whether you buy—NOW!

Buy in September—and the way to Recovery is made clear. Buy in September—and this country will gain speed in its return to better times.

Buy in September—and you help yourself, your country and your President!

Warners to Put Life Story of Mexico's Assassinated President in Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
[illegible]

Los Angeles, Sept. 19—"Viva Villa," M. G. M.'s drama based on the hectic career of the Mexican bandit, will have a companion piece. Jack Warner is making extensive plans to film "The Life of Obregon," Mexico's assassinated president.

Obregon's relation to Villa, however, was not a friendly one. It was he who drove Pancho Villa out of power in Mexico and declared war on all bandits. Manuel Reachi, former Mexican consul, Agnes Ayres' ex-husband, is co-authoring the Obregon drama with Carmen Lopez Figueroa of Mexico City. The entire picture will be filmed in the sister republic.

I'll say for Darryl Zanuck, Twentieth Century and Co., when Lady Ann Harding comes over on the lot she is going to be given a supporting cast wot is a cast. Otto Kruger, excellent stage actor and under contract to Metro-[illegible] Mayer, has been borrowed for one of the leading male roles in "Gallant Lady." Clive Brook, who understands the Harding temperament and who has been in other Harding pictures, gets the other man's role. Just between you and me, Miss Harding is said to still be very much interested in a certain writer in our town.

Louella O. Parsons

A New [illegible]
[illegible] friend Sam Jaffe, producer), is arriving here. The Sam Jaffe of whom I speak is the actor who created the role of Kringelein in the original New York stage version of "Grand Hotel." He is being brought West to play the role of Peter, the emperor, who figured so importantly in the life of Catherine the Great. In other words, he is one of the head men in Marlene Dietrich's next picture which Josef Von Sternberg figures will be under way by the middle of October.

* * *

The Doc Says No

Funny the way these girls let themselves get bossed once they are married. Helen Mencken's husband, Dr Henry Templeton Smith, put thumbs down on a Radio contract offered her. A picture was waiting and an excellent offer made to her to come to Hollywood, but friend husband said "Nothing doing." Perhaps Dr. Smith, who is a member of an old and distinguished New England family, heard tales about our Hollywood.

* * *

Chatter in Hollywood:

Rumors of an unfriendly gesture toward Adrienne Ames before she departed for Reno to obtain her divorce are current in Hollywood. Seems some one tried to destroy Miss Ames' summer home and at the same time let Bruce Cabot feel that he was anything but popular with them. Young Cabot is reported as saying that it would take more than a few threats to change his feelings toward Miss Ames.

* * *

A little crowing, loud too, on the part of Merian Cooper and Pandro Berman. Robert Shane, stage actor of the type of Gary Cooper and Cary Grant, has affixed his signature to a Radio contract. The best bet in years is the way he is described to this gullible writer. I'll take a look at him when he returns from Virginia, where he is going to play in "Rodney," his first picture, and report personally whether I agree with Radio ravings. Walter Huston and Frances Dee are also off to the Virginia with the "Rodney" company.

* * *

I am told that Fay Wray's complete collapse on Columbia's "Men of Steel" has sent her to bed for a rest. She has made nine pictures this year. Rupert Hughes is that proud of his pretty red-headed wife these days. She has just sold a short story to Liberty under her maiden name of Patterson Dial. This, according to Rupert, is only one of the many magazine stories she has successfully authored. A letter from mutual friends of the James Walkers says that the former Betty Compton has turned [illegible] tional. It seems Jimmy wants his wife to be domestic and not return to the stage or make pictures.

* * *

Snapshots of Hollywood:

GARY LEON casting glances in the direction of ROSCOE ATES' daughter, DOROTHY. He was rumored not long ago as the principal interest in the EX-MRS. RUDY VALLEE'S life. The ESTELLE TAYLOR-ROLAND BROWN romance revived. EMANUEL COHEN, who bought MAE WEST a stole [illegible] COOPER escorting MADELINE FIELD (CAROLE LOMBARD'S secretary) to the fights. GLENDA FARRELL and ROBERT RISKIN still looking into each other's eyes. BOOTS MALLORY and BILL CAGNEY staying up very late in the Club Ballyhoo. DICK POWELL and JIMMIE DUNN dividing a mighty pretty girl between them at the fights. TOM MIX postcards from classic Cambridge where he has been making personal appearance. RALPH MORGAN decorating his bride of 23 years with orchids on their wedding anniversary. GENE FOWLER is back in town. RAMON NOVARRO giving a retake of his European concerts to invited guests in his little theater. That's all today.

14,400 in 2-Day Film Rush

The success of "Damaged Lives" is turning into something of a showman's miracle. Up to the time of the premiere, none knew how it would "take" with the public.

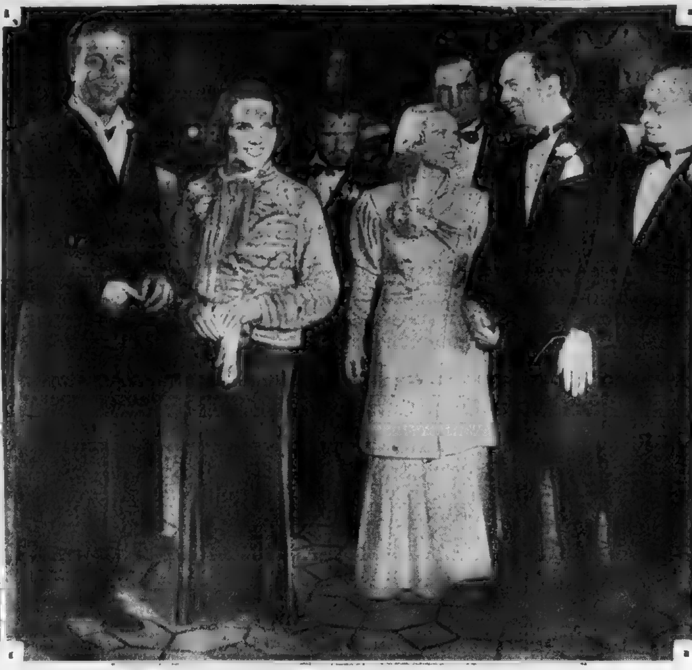

Despite the worst of weather, on Saturday and Sunday the film played to 14,400 persons, according to announcement. Yesterday the rush continued.

Helen Hayes in Exeter Film

Helen Hayes is the brilliant star on the Exeter screen currently, the photoplay being that corking drama, "Another Language," the associate film being "Moonlight and Pretzels," with Leo Carrillo.

Bette's Well Escorted

DICK POWELL MARY BRIAN BETTE DAVIS

Filmland's favorites must step out to premieres after long hours at the studios and here you see Bette Davis, a Greater Boston girl and one of Hollywood's best actresses, and Mary Brian at a recent opening. Miss Brian is accompanied by Dick Powell, also a favorite on the screen, while Miss Davis, of whom all Newton is proud, was escorted by no less than three swains.

Comedy and Dance Features on Scollay Stage Bill

By LEIGH HARBRIDGE

This is something of an international week at the Scollay. There is the German lady, Marlene Dietrich, fascinatingly attractive in Songs of Songs, for the screen feature, and on stage, there is Ann Codee of Paris, to top the vaudeville program. The whole show is a good one, and the variety bill has neat balance, its highlights being expert dancing and the comedy element.

* * *

Speed with the word, along with cleverness, for the Osakas, perch artists, opening the footlight section of the entertainment. The three California "Red Heads" go strong in second place, winning much applause; then Buddy Walker stirs up plenty of laughs with his nutty patter and antics. Maidie and Ray try their cunning on ropes, and weave in much fun; and then Jordan & Stone, with one assistant, keep the air hilarious with radio stunts, imitations and a rousing funny Russian finale.

An outstanding act is the dance revue headed by Duke Mer[illegible], Fay Tucker and Johnson, and Demarest sisters. A score big, but the adagio team win the [illegible] honors for [illegible] tion has only possesses novelty, which is rare in these turns, but is accomplished with unusual speed and spirit.

EXPERT PLAY REOPENS HOLLIS

"Inspector Charlie Chan" is Finely Staged and Acted

By HARRIS MORGAN

Charlie Chan came into being for the first time on any stage, at the Hollis, last night. It was a notable event, this re-opening of the famous playhouse; for the vehicle of the evening was "Inspector Charlie Chan," produced by a Bostonian and based on a novel written by a former Bostonian. So the large audience was all the more enthusiastic. And the drama itself merited the ovation, for it is an expertly fashioned mystery play, finely staged and superbly acted.

* * *

The entire action of the play takes place in a hunting lodge at Lake Tahoe, Nevada. The plot evolves about the vivacious Madam Landini, and the trouble all starts when she enters the home of her first husband as a guest. Several shootings occur, adding to the suspense and mystery, but with his usual calm and intelligence, Inspector Charlie Chan solves the mystery to the satisfaction of one and all. Interest is sustained throughout [illegible] adaptation of the well-written book.

William Harrigan

Chan, with his quaint sayings and occidental mannerisms, was portrayed in all his glory in the excellent performance of William Harrigan. All the characters of the late Earl Derr Biggers' book, "Keeper of the Keys," adapted for stage presentation by Valentine Davis, were deftly enacted. Special honors went to Dwight Frye in the other Chinese role, that of Ah Sing. Roberta Beatty played the part of the much-married Ellen Landini to perfection. The love interest was carried through satisfactorily by Ruth Easton as Kathleen Ireland, with John Griggs as Don Holt.

Fleming Ward gave a pleasing portrayal of Dudley Ward, Romaine Callender was fine in the role of Dr. Swan, and Aristides de Leoni was realistic in the part of the temperamental musician, Luis Romano, with Howard St. John adding realism to the role of John Ryder.

Cook Show to End Friday

"Hold Your Horses," starring Joe Cook, ends its run at the Shubert next Friday night. It will open at the Winter Garden in New York next Monday night. There will be three matinees this week, tomorrow, Thursday and Friday.

The closing Friday will enable the show to return to New York in sufficient time to hang the scenery for the premiere.

"DAMAGED LIVES" AT MAJESTIC
"A TRIUMPH"—SAYS BOSTON AMERICAN

Bold Stroke in Movie Proves Keen Drama

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

By the measure of screen merit, aided and abetted by courage and sincerity, "Damaged Lives," given a memorable and unique premiere last night at the Majestic, is quite the most amazing product of all the sound screen. In manner hitherto untouched in the talkies, this Hollywood film plumbs the heart in a new way for its reaction of taut audience interest. It thrills in a fashion entirely out of the run of the cinema's fiction mill.

I refer to the first portion of the two-part show. The last half is a lecture, harrowing, perhaps, because of its exhibits A, and B, and on, climacterically to Z, but conceived as a vital essential to presenting a clearcut case in behalf of the public welfare.

But let none fear that what is known as movie entertainment is lacking; it is present in the photoplay itself. It could stand alone, and be an unmatched hit, in the talkie era, and for years before that, in handling a basically delicate theme with exquisite sentiment and intelligence, at the same time serving the dramatic essentials.

The photoplay is the story of a couple in any city or town. The youth weds, ignorant of the evil he is bringing to his bride, and into their home. The idea is one of the danger of disease; with subtle care, the theme expands. Pathos, and then tragedy, impends—then medical science plays the hero role.

There are bits of humor here and there, fading in the tide of fear and tension. I cannot but admire the deep sincerity with which producers, author, director and cast carry through; not once is there a false note, a jarring tone. It is a supremely difficult feat, and it is achieved perfectly.

As the bride Diane Sinclair is conviction itself; Lyman Williams strikes me as a romantic lead worth the attention of the studios, a lad with vast personality, good voice, and even good looks. Jason Robards and Marceline Day also appear; and the doctor is the star of the cast.

This is expert film drama, and it not only gets, dramatically, under the skin, but reaches soul depths I doubt any talkie has yet touched in you.

The lecture that makes up the close of the program is entirely apart from our usual screen fare; but for ourselves we can say it added profoundly to the interest of this show at the Majestic.

ARGUMENT LONE CLUE IN DEATH INQUIRY

This Is Life

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

Mr George Arliss's film about the late Monsieur Voltaire [illegible] Arouet has just reached this storm-swept, rain-beaten fishing town. I went over to see it the other afternoon, tired of listening to the roof leak and of seeing my garden blown to shreds.

I had been looking forward to it with anticipation and some misgivings. Anticipations because I am generally fond of historical-costume stuff in fiction and the drama. Also because Mr. Arliss was obviously born to play Voltaire, just as, earlier, he had been obviously born to play Disraeli.

With misgivings, because a New York critic for whom I have some respect had intimated that as soon as the film was released the great Frenchman must have begun turning over rapidly in his tomb in the Pantheon or wherever his dust did finally repose. The critic intimated that the shade of Voltaire must be hiding behind the barn in the Elysian Fields, while the shades of Horace, Rabelais, Rousseau, Tom Paine and Thomas Jefferson gave him the raspberry for having been the victim of another Hollywood atrocity.

Now that I am away from the theater I can see that there is some reason for this point of view. The story of the play is undiluted hokum, its chief effects having been "borrowed" from the play scene in Hamlet and the climax of Bulwer-Lytton's Richelieu. It takes the infamous Calas case, full of opportunities for great and painful drama, one of the indisputably great moments in Voltaire's uneven life, and reduces it to the level of a court comedy.

This was the episode which more than any other illustrated Voltaire's lifelong zeal to "crush the infamous thing," by which he meant the unbridled authority of church and state. Even in those days of callousness and cruelty the Calas case was a scandal. Voltaire risked much in making an issue of it. To make it a mere matter of a treacherous courtier, an uxorious and foolish monarch and a lovely and high-minded mistress is, of course, to belittle both history and the man.

The picture is characteristically conceived in cowardice and exhibited in deceit. The title is called "The Affairs of Voltaire" with a nice lip-licking implication. And the posters exhibit the chief actors only in modern dress, on the assumption that the American film audience will flock to a modern Parisian peep-show but will avoid a great actor in a play about a great hero of the past. I wonder if Hollywood ever heard of the "little blue books" or knows how many hundred million copies of the classics have been sold to the great American public.

And yet, such is the power of the actor, I will wager that any spectator ignorant but not utterly feeble-minded will go away from the theater with a lively sense that here was a great personality who somehow played a major part in the campaign for liberty. He won't have any clear idea of Voltaire's place in French letters. The lines we hear in his bad tragedy played before the king were obviously written by the author of "Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl." He won't know anything about the Encyclopedia nor Rousseau and "Candide."

But he will get a sense of a frail old man of tremendous personal charm and power, lively and monkey-like, more benevolent than witty (in this version) but obviously with the comic sense, one who is willing to run risks to revenge innocence murdered, to protect the afflicted in danger and to fight against autocratic power given to tyranny and greed. He will get a sense, at least, of that. Well, isn't that thumb-nail sketch, at least, of Voltaire? I think so.

And the close of the film with Voltaire posed, pen in hand, like the famous statue, while all around him drums roll, voices cry and the tumult and the shouting of the opening days of the Revolution beat upon his imagination. That finale, I imagine, might well send the occasional spectator off to look up this old man Voltaire, to see what he did do and what he wrote. And so looking, perhaps he may come upon "Candide" and will discover a new chapel in the great church of letters.

* * *

After all, if Arliss can give you some such impression as that, the film, for all its silliness of intrigue and conventional romance, is not so worthless. True, the whole effect is one of sweetness and light, no end. But I do not suppose Hollywood would dare to film even a mildly realistic picture of Voltaire, any more than of Queen Christina of Sweden or Catherine of Russia. The realism of the 18th century is a bit strong for our stomachs of today. The 18th century was gross. It believed in direct action. It got things done, no matter how.

A true picture of Voltaire in action might be of considerable value in these days, if only to show how a master goes at the job of making a row. This bit of perfumed theater won't help that way at all. But it does capture something of the 18th century delight in personality and its respect for strong personality. And that's something!

U. S. CHECKS ON MILK WAR CHARGE

Price Variance and Surplus Dumping Alleged in Protest

An independent checkup of fact in the milk situation [illegible] made by the licensing and enforcement division of the U. S. Department of Agriculture it was [illegible] today.

While the results of this check are being awaited the milk agreement which was to have been put into effect in this territory [illegible] month has been held up.

The [illegible] development in the milk situation was revealed by consumer protests to Secretary Wallace that large distributors were using surplus milk to defeat competitive Atty. Maurice Goldman, who represented consumer groups at milk hearings in Washington [illegible] letter to Secretary Wallace charging surplus milk is being used by distributors [illegible] at the expense of the farmers.

He urged that an investigation be made of the use of surplus in price cutting competition. He said an agreement among distributors to charge 12 cents for delivered milk was being violated with sales to some customers [illegible] cents.

His letter in part follows:

"Our producer price on fluid milk is 6¼ cents and the delivered retail price 12 cents. Yet I have original bills on the same grade of milk delivered to Greater Boston homes at 12, 11, 10½, 10, 9½, 9 cents. If distributors can afford to bottle and deliver 6¼ cent milk for 9 cents, they should show no favoritism or discrimination.

"Let them sell it to all consumers at that price. Obviously they cannot afford it. How then is it done? Either by selling at a loss for cut-throat competition in violation of the NRA or by using surplus for fluid, and so taking the funds needed for slashing out of the farmer's pay check.

"Certain wholesale outlets get their milk at 8 cents per quart. The Boston State Hospital pays .0178 for fluid milk. The United States Navy pays .01625 for Grade A milk. This cannot be done on a base price of 6¼ or 7 cents. And the loss involved to the distributor should not be made up either by the producer or consumer.

"I want to see all consumers treated alike. If they save a few cents buying over the counter, that is one thing. But there should be no price range of 9 to 12 cents a quart for the same grade of milk delivered in the same neighborhood, especially when the publicly announced price is 12 cents."

Bridge: Aces for Youth But Divorce for Age

By PEGGY DOYLE

Youth is not only served—it's dealt.

Yes, sir, it's in the cards. When you [illegible] your [illegible] a bridge table, your hands on those 13 pasteboards and your mind on a prize, figure a new percentage for yourself. If your opponents in the aggregate are older than you and [illegible] not, your theme-song becomes "I'm in the money."

For the youthful mind is [illegible] [illegible] the fact that [illegible] untrammeled [illegible] the memory [illegible] essentials of the now defunct auction is an additional asset.

Listen to James Magner, Jr., one of New England's first young bridge players and pasteboard [illegible] shot at the Hawthorne Bridge Club:

"Youth holds the winning cards in bridge. Nine of the best bridge players in New England—seven of whom are Harvard grads, incidentally—are still in their twenties. As a matter of tournament record bridge has become a young people's game or, rather, to be truthful if tactless, a young man's game. The present generation of bridge players haven't had to unlearn a lot of old auction rules—they've started at scratch, and they've been aided in their championship climb by a good measure of straight, fast thinking and more than a soupçon of the Lindbergh type of daring.

ONE WOMAN A STAR

"Who are the better players—men or women? Well, boys and girls, I'll answer that by telling you very confidentially that I can name you a dozen men players to one woman possessed of the stuff that makes a bridge champion.

Rosamond Vahey of Watertown, daughter of the late James H. Vahey, criminal lawyer, and sister of Mrs. Frederick Robinson, holder of the Massachusetts State golf championship and the mixed pair contract championship of New England, is the girl I'm talking about. She's in a class by herself.

"Otherwise, I'd say—barely above a whisper—that woman's well-known intuition interferes with her bridge skill. Bridge demands logic and a practical knowledge of psychology, which—pardon me, madames and mademoiselles, if I seem unchivalrous—I've discovered to be purely masculine traits.

"I will say this, though—the average woman player is an infinitely better player than the average man player. Because why? Well, because this type of woman player usually has the time and the inclination to perfect her game. On the other hand, her male opponent is prone to think bridge is child's play and he can pick it up or leave it alone for months at a time and still hold the winning cards.

PARTNERS—NEVER

"And now may I mount the lecture platform and assert in stentorian tones that husbands and wives should NEVER play bridge together. [illegible] it leads to dissension, sometimes continues throughout the night in magnavox argument and not infrequently ends in divorce. And, now, don't say I didn't warn you.

"As one who has been an unwilling party to the third part in hundreds—I could even say thousands, and still be frank about it—of marital bridge embroglios, I have this to say: There's only one couple in a million who are well mated when it comes to bridge, and that couple is the Fred Robinsons of West Newton (mentioned here before). The Robinsons are one of the four strongest bridge teams in New England. Though they play for stakes that were considered high even before Black Thursday, they can play together and enjoy it. A miracle, of course.

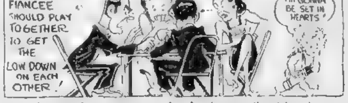

NAMES CHAMPIONS

"In conclusion, I'd like to mention the names of New England's youthful champions—Milton Casson, of Brookline; Sam O'Connell, of Holyoke; John Loston, of Watertown; John Lydon, of Boston; Ralph Ells, of Cambridge and Stanley Stevens, of Hartford, Conn."

Stanley Stevens [illegible] Constance Innes [illegible] husband? Remember the daughter of Charles H. Innes, Back Bay Republican political boss, who charged the [illegible] [illegible] and Harvard man with throwing the entire [illegible] in her face reinforced by a [illegible] to her pretty jaw during a bridge game because he didn't approve of a play she had made?

Well, where were we? Oh, yes, proving the contention that [illegible] been [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] double proved that it's [illegible] young [illegible] a man.

Having but given [illegible] new angles for additional [illegible] [illegible] a pastime which [illegible] some [illegible] uproar [illegible] close today [illegible] on. Good [illegible] kind [illegible] don't be afraid of the big bad wolf.

BYRD'S POLAR PLANE ARRIVES AT AIRPORT

Huge Biplane Radio Equipped for Antarctic Broadcasts

The huge Curtiss twin-motored [illegible] which will be used by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd in his expedition to the Antarctic arrived at East Boston airport today.

The plane was flown here by Harold I. June, chief pilot of the expedition which gets under way in a few weeks. He was chief pilot and radio man on Byrd's South pole dash in 1929. The [illegible] plane will be housed in the National Guard hangars at the airport.

Preparations are [illegible] rapidly for the departure of the expedition. The Bear, one of the two expedition vessels, went to dry dock yesterday and is being thoroughly overhauled. It is believed she will be brought to Boston Navy Yard to be stocked with supplies and equipment this week.

The Pacific Fir, flagship of Admiral Byrd, is expected to join the Bear at the Navy Yard.

The 150 sled dogs to be taken on the trip are at present at Wonalancet, N. H. A few days before the expedition is scheduled to leave they will be crated and shipped here.

It was also learned today that arrangements have been completed for regular weekly broadcasts by the expedition after it reaches Little America in the Antarctic continent. An attempt to broadcast from the expedition plane while in flight will also be made.

Bob Quinn Turns To Brooklyn and The National League ↕ And Month Old American Prophecy Becomes Fulfilled

By AUSTEN LAKE

Anything can happen now!

Bob Quinn, faithful and militant disciple of the American League since 1916, has signed to be general manager of the Brooklyn National League Club, taking office on Oct. 1

It fulfills the prophecy made in these columns on August 8, when the question was asked, "what does the American League propose to do about Bob Quinn?" and predicting that, if the A. L. did not do something soon, the National League would.

Well, this is it, dearie!

The truth is that Quinn, having resigned his foremanship of the Red Sox Reading nursery less than five weeks ago, acted on the Brooklyn offer within the last few days, sorting it out as the most desirable among a handful of others which included the presidency of the American Association, the presidency of the International League and the general managership of the Cincinnati Reds. For, although Bob had nothing in view until lately, each of these offers arrived on the heels of the other until Bob suddenly became the most sought after man in professional baseball

As it is Quinn undertakes one of the most nettlesome jobs in baseball, one that for years has been fraught with internal discord and office politics which, in his forthright straight-from-the shoulder style, he will be at some pains to correct. For Bob becomes supreme dictator of the club, from groundkeeper to chairman of the board, just as he was in St. Louis between 1916 and 1922 and at Boston between 1923 and 1933.

For years the Brooklyn Club has been torn between the McKeever and the Ebbets interests, a feud that resolved into a running fight between separate groups of stock holders who were always asking for an accounting and charging each other with the seven mortal sins. In time the team became known as the Daffies because the players on the field seemed to take their cue from the owners and sympathetically, performed all sorts of comical gyrations.

Landis Tries to Bring Order Out of Brooklyn Chaos

For instance, there was the time when Uncle Wilbert Robinson growing weary of the silly action of his team, formed the Bonehead Club. "From now on," he said, "every time a Brooklyn player commits a nonsense, he puts ten dollars into the club kitty." And that afternoon at Braves Field, Robbie paid the first sawbuck, after handing a batting list to the umpires that contained the name of Al Lopez as his starting catcher and then sending in Ernie Lombardi. As I recall it Robbie forthwith abolished the Bonehead Club and confiscated the kitty.

The stories of Brooklyn's daffiness on the field are innumerable. But the daffiness of the club officials are no less comical. Several years ago Judge K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball decided to arbitrate between the two factions and called a meeting at the Hotel Roosevelt. The Ebbets heirs came in a body, stalking stiffly into the room and sitting on one side. And the McKeevers trooped in a moment later, likewise in a solid squad and sat on the other side. From appearances it might have been a meeting of the Hatfield and McCoy families come to settle that famous mountain feud.

"Now, gentlemen, we are gathered . . . ," began Judge Landis, in honeyed tones. But he got no further, because Steve McKeever, who is playfully called Judge, bounced to his feet, banged his cane on the floor and demanded to be heard. He need not have demanded, because we of the attending press, far down the hallway heard him plainly

For the next 10 minutes the Ebbets and the McKeevers put on a shouting match, through which Judge Landis' faint pleading could be heard, "Gentlemen, gentlemen." Finally the door popped open and Landis scuttled out, shaking his silvery poll and wiping his steaming forehead. And after a spell, the McKeevers and the Ebbets trailed after him bellowing like a chorus from Tannhauser

Some time later, a mediation was effected—probably by telephone—and a chap by the name of Dutch Carter, the old Yale pitcher, was made a sort of joint curator and justice of the peace. But in time Carter, who was something of a baseball fanatic, got tired of diplomacy and began to dabble with the affairs on the field, sometimes sitting behind the Brooklyn bench and wig-wagging to Max Carey when to take out a faltering pitcher or insert a pinch hitter.

What, No Fever?: Call Dr. Quinn at Once

This year, for the first time, the Brooklyn club failed to make money. It may not have lost much, but it certainly failed to make any. And that, more than anything else, calmed the fevered brows of the Ebbets and the McKeevers, who had been so used to fever, by this time, that they rushed off pell mell to consult a practical business doctor, which, of course, was our own Bob Quinn.

To Boston newsmen who had watched the muscles at the back of Bob's jaws grow large through years of clinching his teeth and the frontal bulges of his forehead develop from intense cerebral effort, it is not surprising that he should choose the hardest job in sight. But the vision of Quinn, the indelible American Leaguer, who used to utter salvos of joy after the Athletics and Yankees had drubbed the N. L. World Series entry, jumping on the other side of the fence, forms a whimsical picture.

Perhaps the thought of turning his coat, after all these years, may have weighed on Bob's conscience, for before he accepted the Brooklyn offer he went to President John A. Heydler and to the National League and asked, "Any objection to my coming into your league?" To which Heydler, naturally, answered, "None at all, Bob." That courtesy having been attended to, Quinn, who, but for this same conscience and the desire to protect his Red Sox investors, might have been president of the American League at the time Ernest Barnard died, went back across the bridge and signed a contract for one year

It is the first contract that he has ever had. Always before he had worked on a verbal agreement, but the Dodger owners, desiring to wash up their troubles, obliged him to put it in writing. I know that when he was head of the Red Sox every dollar's worth of the club's stock was in his name with never a scrap of paper to show its true ownership. And when Tom Yawkey's lawyer came to complete the purchase of the property last February 29, he said, "You'll need a little time to get the releases from the stockholders," to which Quinn grinned and pointed to the safe. "Not a minute," said he, "it's all in that safe under my name."

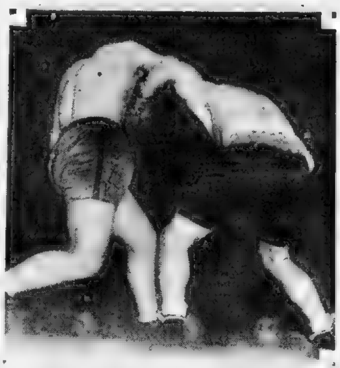

"A marvelous demonstration of faith," said the lawyer, never thinking that his voice would echo in Brooklyn six months later.

CANAM LEAGUE FATE AT STAKE

The fate of the Canadian-American hockey league, junior professional circuit which last season operated with six teams, was being settled this afternoon in a sudden death period at the Hotel Lincoln, New York City

At this meeting was to be decided whether the Boston Bruins, represented by Manager Art Ross, would be willing to undertake the risk of again promoting minor league hockey in Boston. For the Bruins lost nearly $20,000 last season.

Representatives of the six clubs including Boston, Springfield, Providence, New Haven, Philadelphia and Quebec were present, both club owners and franchise owners. The Boston Garden, owner of the Cubs franchise, was represented by Harold J. Dibblee, acting general manager since the sudden death of Joseph Gilman, a peculiar hookup in view of the fact that Dibblee is also general manager of the New York Garden, which owns the Springfield franchise

Dibblee's interest, aside from the question of the life of the league, centered on whether the Bruins would allow the Cubs to be housed in the Boston Garden again this winter, they taking the view that minor league hockey detracts from interest in major league hockey. The proposal previously was to have the Cubs play at the Boston Arena

Following the league meeting today Dibblee and Ross were to sit down in a personal huddle

BOWDOIN'S BEST TEAM IN 12 YEARS AIMS FOR MAINE TITLE

CAPTAIN SON OF FAMOUS "ACE" 30 YEARS AGO

By BILL GRIMES

Brunswick, Me., Sept. 19—For 12 years, Bowdoin has [illegible] around in the mire of Maine State championships, but in the opinion of those who are supposedly in the know," the Black and White [illegible] ing places this fall.

And, if there is anything in the adage "Like father like son" we are willing to trail along with the [illegible] knowing ones.

At the conclusion of the 1932 season, the Bowdoin letter men elected Henry Hubbard to lead this year's varsity. Now Hubbard may or may not mean anything to the present day follower of football. But, to the gridiron enthusiast of say 30 years back Hubbard was a name to be revered.

SON OF JOHN HUBBARD

Three decades ago, Amherst [illegible] a 190-pound back into the football firmament, who gained recognition as one of the greatest ball carriers in the country—John Hubbard. He was a he-football player, and make no mistake about it.

In those days Amherst was not rated as a big leaguer, but between John Hubbard and [illegible] a great [illegible] Geoffrey Amherst registered and how John Hubbard was also a hurdler, and was selected to represent the United States in the Olympic games at London, in 1908.

Henry Hubbard is the son of John Hubbard. And if the [illegible] leader is a chip off the old block or any part of a chip the Black and White is worthy of the most careful scrutiny, from Maine, Bates and Colby.

Since Charlie Bowser, Pittsburgh, replaced Mal Morrill as head coach, Bowdoin has won only six out of twenty one games. The Black and White made its best showing under Bowser back in 1930, which was the first year the former Panther had charge of football at Brunswick. With Foster, Ricker and Souther as his key men, Bowser beat Mass. State, Tufts, Maine and Wesleyan, tied Williams but lost to Colby and Bates three years ago.

Bowdoin's 13 to 7 victory over Maine that year gave Bates the State title. The following year Bowdoin wa[illegible] out, [illegible] scoring but [illegible] Last season, the Black and White got off to a fine [illegible] State [illegible] Tufts but the [illegible] the extent of [illegible] Maine [illegible] 20 to 0 shellacking [illegible]

"LITTLE THREE" FOES

Whereas Bates [illegible] aim for the State [illegible] the Bowdoin [illegible] tories over Mass. State, Williams, Wesleyan and Tufts [illegible] opening game with Coach Taube's "Staters" to wind up with the Jumbos, the wearers of the Black and White are under pressure.

Until three years ago, Bowdoin managed to go into its dance before the audience walked out. Then, the class of 1933 became eligible for varsity competition with about as much football material as there is in Earl Carroll's Vanities.

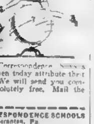

And, there was nothing to rave about in the ensuing class. Footballically speaking, the classes of 1933 and 1934 were a complete flop. The class of 1933 contributed a center, one guard and halfback to the cause while the present senior class can boast of Capt. Hubbard, Davis, an all-state end, McKenney, a tackle and Archibald and Ackermann, two first string guards.

Bowdoin will survive or perish upon Eddie Baravalle, who hails from Rockville Center, N. Y. Baravalle is a fullback weighing 200 pounds, and is a junior. He is the son of that famous orchestra leader and is a talented pianist. Baravalle did not come out for the varsity last fall but reported for spring practice. He is fast and a virtual power house and according to Coach Bowser is headed for All-State honors.

There are three sophomores who apparently have the [illegible] into the backfield [illegible] George Griffith, who [illegible] McL[illegible] Brown, labs as one of the best prospects in New England, Carl Connor, former Stoneham high star, and Al Putnam who re-entered Bowdoin a year ago after an attack of homesickness had forced him back into the north country the previous year.

Griffith is not in shape, but Coach Bowser expects him to be ready for the state series, while Putnam, whose father is an alumnus of Bowdoin and his mother a graduate of Colby, has fine possibilities.

Ferrell in Outfield Is Still a Pitcher

By JOE CASHMAN

Maybe it [illegible] Or maybe a reformed pitcher can't learn to play the outfield in 10 lessons.

Whatever the answer Wes Ferrell, who once pitched a no-hit game for the Indians, saw to it that [illegible] Oral Hildebrand didn't do [illegible] rent series with the Red Sox.

Two safeties were charged against Oral. Both landed in left field, where Ferrell was present but not, by any stretch of the imagination, playing.

Had your agent started at the crack of the bat, he could have raced down from the press coop through the Sox offices, under the grand stand and out to the pasture in ample time to grab though undoubtedly drop, either hoist. Joe Vosmik long a fixture in that particular section of the field, for the Indians, could have enjoyed a glass of ale and a handful of pretzels while waiting for the pops to land. Ferrell didn't come close to either.

HE'S STILL BOSS

Nevertheless and notwithstanding, the great Wesley will continue to keep his $15,000 salaried pitching wing in shape by picking clover in the garden. Hildebrand and the other Forest City flingers may not [illegible] orders and like it, like most of us.

Walter Johnson, a greater pitcher than any of them, including Ferrell, happens to be boss of the outfit and he opines Wesley will remain as is.

"As an outfielder, Wes may still be a great pitcher, but it's punch rather than pitching we need and that Ferrell boy's hitting makes it imperative that he play daily," says Walter.

(Ed. Note—Ferrell's slugging was as timely as his fly-chasing was putrid during the Monday matinee. He cracked out a double and two singles.)

"What change, if any, next season will bring in Ferrell's status, I haven't stopped to consider as yet," the pilot continued. "I fear he will never again be as effective on the mound as he was prior to hurting his arm early in the season. Pitchers have been known to come back as good as ever after such mishaps, but it happens very seldom.

"I do believe, though, that after the winter's rest Wes will be able to pitch winning ball again, and I hope to bolster our attack enough to return him to the mound corps next spring. He'll be in there somewhere. His hitting makes that certain."

JOHNSON CHANGED

Incidentally, quite a change has come over Johnson in the past year. He was calm, quiet and easy-going when holding the managerial reins at Washington. Too much so for his own good, the critics always claimed. And, apparently, he agrees now, for he drives the Indians at top speed. When he was nine runs ahead yesterday, he was urging more markers and exhorting that the Sox be set down in order.

He even dropped a hint that it might have been profitable for him to have been more hard-boiled at the Capital, while discussing the surge of his old charges to the American League pennant this season.

"Last winter's deals helped the Senators tremendously," your correspondent ventured.

"Yes," Barney replied, "Whitehill, Stewart, Schulte and Russell improved the club considerably but more important, the shifts broke up cliques and factions that were harmful."

Ferrell, at his best, never looked more formidable on the hill than Hildebrand did in his two-hit effort. In seven of the nine frames the young right hander set the Sox [illegible] Dusty Cooke got a fluke single in the fourth, when the natives filled the bases with the aid of two passes. George Stumpf, playing his first game at the Fens since being shipped to Reading last May, connected for a pop double in the ninth.

TROSKY THROWS BOMB

The Indians showed up with a first sacker named Hal Trosky from somewhere in the Association. With a guy of that name around, there was bound to be a revolution, and he started it with a home run with two mates on in the very first frame.

Dusty Rhodes then settled down to hurl gilt-edge ball until the eighth, when your Mr. Trosky broke loose with a single, his third safety of the day, and before the smoke of that stanza had cleared away the [illegible] had [illegible] six more markers.

FENWAY PARK ENLARGED

Baseball fans will scarcely recognize Fenway Park when the opening of the 1934 season rolls around.

For next Monday construction work will begin which, at the expenditure of nearly a half a million dollars, will make the Red Sox home one of the most beautiful parks in the country.

Plans have already been submitted to Tom Yawkey, and accepted by the youthful owner of the Red Sox, and Eddie Collins, his general manager. The necessary permits for construction have already been obtained from city officials, and with the pledged co-operation of Mayor James M. Curley behind them, the Fenway owners have decided to begin work.

This work will be carried on during football season, and the reconstruction of the entire field will begin early in December. In right field, the grandstands will replace part of the present pavilion.

Duffy's cliff in left field, and the wall surmounting it will be demolished and the left and left-center field fence moved back 20 feet to Landsdowne st. New all steel [illegible] will replace [illegible] center [illegible] and will be built [illegible] the extreme [illegible] of the [illegible] now [illegible] unoccupied.

The rebuilding is expected to [illegible] of the park from 26,000 to 38,000, without destroying the [illegible] feature of the Fens, the closeness of the stands to the field. The work will be completed by April 1, 1934, in time for the opening of the season.

Thirty-six hundred seats will be added to the grandstand behind third base, 2000 behind first base, and a circle of six rows of boxes, adding 2000 box seats to the present capacity of 750.

TRACKMEN OUT FOR BERTHS

E[illegible] and Guy Millbrandt, varsity shot-putter and basketball center, neither of whom has previously played football, appear likely to break into the Northeastern varsity football lineup in the near future on the strength of their showing in practice, to date.

Urban has been used as a guard and has been stopping everything coming his way. He has shown a world of speed on running interference and his ability to handle himself well and pick up fundamentals in fast time, has earned him the respect of Coach McCoy.

BROWN MENTOR ORDERS LIGHT WORKOUT

By F. B. SCHRIFTGIESSER

Providence, Sept. 19—Coach Tuss McLaughry believes in starting his football team slowly. For that reason, there are no bone-wracking early drills on Aldrich Field these days, little contact work, and no tackling the dummy.

"It's a long season," says Tuss, whose team has eight games ahead of it, all but two of them strenuous ones. "I can't see the sense in battering the boys up before the real competition begins."

McLaughry's success in nursing his players undamaged through a difficult series of games is proverbial, dating from his famous "iron men" of 1928. Thurston Towle and Paul Hodge from that eleven are helping coach the Brown Bears this fall.

Only one workout a day is the schedule through Thursday. This morning was devoted to the theoretical side of football, with blackboard talk by the coach in one of the University class rooms on the campus.

USE SHIFT PLAYS

From the first appearance of the team on [illegible] it was evident that McLaughry's attack this fall is to be based upon a liberal use of shift plays. Instead of many calisthenics, he is having the boys run through signal drills, a shift from the unbalanced line to a balanced one being given much emphasis.

As to the backfield, McLaughry declared that his triple wing back formation will once again be in evidence, but with variations. No attempt to put on these variations will be made for several days until the players have really got going. The first necessity is to select a group of new players with which to bolster the thin line of lettermen.

In the backfield it looks as though Captain Joe Buonanno and Dave Allen, lettermen last year, were sure of their positions again. The other two regular posts are still to be won. McLaughry had Bill Karaban and Harry Sopney running through signals with them today, but Henry Hart, Guy Burt and Warren Groce all are worth watching. There [illegible] ation necessitated by an illness last spring. But coming up from the freshman [illegible] Howard [illegible] who were [illegible] Academy [illegible]

QUINCY SOPH STAR

Two other [illegible] Quincy is a sorely needed tackle and Ted Etchings from Malden a guard who shows promise. Harrie Hart—no relation to Henry who plays in the backfield—did not play football as a freshman, but worked so well in spring practice that McLaughry has an eye on him as a possible end. Harrie went to Choate School.

Of the men who last year had some experience in the line even though they did not earn letters, there are Bill Broomhead and Bob Chapin, ends. Chapin comes from Newton Center and went to Worcester Academy. John Allen and Fred Rea are guards, and little Al Mignone plays well at either guard or center, despite his weight of only 160 pounds.

All the sub centers of last year are missing but Dan Fraad, guard last season, seems certain of moving into the pivot post this year. And George Lear, veteran guard, is likely to move over to tackle to help fill one of the holes there.

CRACK FLYER CHOICE ON FAST TRACK

Rockingham Selections

SELECTIONS AT ROCKINGHAM
By RAILBIRD

1—Airy Spirit, Chimney Top, Roman Queen.
2—Hickory Lad, Blue Foam, Marge.
3—Chief Almgren, Pennate, Sun Shadow.
4—Jesting, Ebony Princess, Kai Finn.
5—Eyota, Crack Flyer, Dark Law.
6—Tremendous, Strait Jacket, High Socks.
7—Wood God, Boundless Deep, Sisko.

BEST BET—JESTING

Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., Sept. 19—Five sprints and two route events, with the feature of the card the 5½ furlong Salem Purse for three-year-olds and up, was the offering set before New England racing addicts here today.

William H. Galagher, New York sportsman, had entered his Crack Flyer and obtained Jockey Westrope to ride and the combination was made the 9 to 5 favorite to win all the money. Crack Flyer was to tote top weight of 115 pounds.

Racing secretary Jim Munroe liked the chances of W. W. Vaughan's Gonspray in the possible field of six and he put the same impost on the son of Gonfalon and Mint Spray. Gonspray, however, was given only a 15 to 1 chance to win by the morning liners. Dabson had the mount.

CRACK FLYER LIKED

The wise ones consider that Crack Flyer, a heretofore disappointing son of My Play and Crack o' Doom, was dropped down a peg for this event and should lead from start to stand. E. B. Smith's Evers, however, and Belmont Evans' Town Square had the boys up in the air because of recent workouts.

Other good ones discussed [illegible] birds at the fall were Greentree Stable's Chimney Top in the first, Paramount Stable's Hickory Lad in the second, E. Culver's Soupcon in the third, P. B. Randolph's Jesting in the fourth, R. Curran's High Socks in the sixth, and Mrs. Edward McCuan's Essie in the seventh.

A fast track faced the starter in each of the seven events and despite the [illegible] fields good time was expected. The racing strip was given a special manicuring yesterday and that it aided was shown when Marooned beat Gold Step in an even second off the track record and the strip was only rated good.

RENEW BATTLE

Each race today was to be for $700 purses. Although the fans of this section are fast learning the devious ways of the thoroughbreds, many of them were planning to still follow Jockeys Porter and Westrope no matter what they rode. Both boys were listed to renew their battle of the saddle in at least four of the races today.

C. V. B. Cushman of Pomfret Centre, Ct., owner of Eastland Farm Stable which raced successfully at The Country Club, Brookline, Mass., meetings some years ago, was guest of W. J. Norton trainer for Mrs. J. H. Whitney, here yesterday. Cushman at one time paid $75,000 for a Broomstick colt named New Broom, which never won a race.

Greater Boston has an oldtime favorite due to go this afternoon in the fourth race. G. H. D. Lamson plans to send out his Flag of Fashion, which used to be favorite in every start at local fairs and hunt meets.

Nelson and Donovan Would Be Great in This Act | Fradd's Grass Drill Makes Pretzels Look Like Rulers

By DAVID F. EGAN

My many friends will be pleased to learn that I have been assaulted with a new ambition, for it is rare in a geezer of my years to pop up, all of a sudden, with a bright, golden, blue-eyed, curly-haired ambition.

It happened in a strange and unusual manner. Your envoy drifted over to Harvard sq., to say how-dee-do to John the Counter Man at Hazen's Lunch; to buy a paper from the blind man who has been a land-mark in the square for y'ars and y'ars; and incidentally, to take young Wesley Fesler apart, and see what made him run, punt, and pass.

Brother Fesler, a hoary old veteran of 25 summers, was easy to approach, even though he was instructing some of the young shoot in the trying art of making a quick kick quick enough, and the old Colonel went rapidly to the side-lines in his wheel-chair, to look upon the confusion of kicking and passing from a safer vantage point.

All was order, suddenly, when Norman Fradd lined the boys up, lay them on their backs, and proceeded to put them through what is known, euphemistically, as a grass drill, or a conditioning exercise.

Joe Cook would have envied it. He can imitate four Hawaiians in a droll, garrulous manner. Suddenly these boys were imitating scores of Herr Paul Bowser's pachyderms. The grunting and groaning reached new heights.

Then, for 3.2 beer is back, they became human pretzels, as Fradd howled, "One, two, three, four," with such a bellow that the ancient ivy on the Stadium stirred, disturbed from its long sleep on those historic walls, and the classic trees outside the practice field sighed drowsily.

"There will be corpses on this field before yon westering sun has touched the sky with its golden fingers," said I to Dolph Samborski, for that's the way Hah-vahd always affects the old Colonel. But a check-up revealed that all the boys unwound and untwisted without even a broken neck, and the fun went on.

They had made Joe Cook's four Hawaiians look like one anaemic gypsy. They could have given Mr. Bowser's rasslers cards and spades in grunting and groaning. They even made the better pretzels seem like angel cake, with a little ice-cream, if you please.

Then they went into their trained seal act, and glorious ambition was born anew in this breast. They crouched on the grass, softened by the steady rat-tat-tat of rain. They shot, like an arrow, into the air. They landed flat on their stomachs, with an oof that issued from their mouths and a plap that echoed dully from the sacred sod.

I gazed speculatively at Swede Nelson, the line-coach, whose brawny chest has dropped so many degrees that it hangs over his belt. I looked with positive en-too-zi-zizm on John Donovan, another line coach who is as tall as he is round, and as thick through the middle as he is wide across the beam.

It is my ambition to watch the Messrs Nelson and Donovan engage in the trained seal act. Your ambassador is not a betting man, from having watched fight managers connive and cross-connive for so many years, but he would like to make a small wager that Swede Nelson, with a crouching start and a leap assisted by friendly hands, would bounce three times before he finally came to earth with a great smoosh; and that it would take the entire Harvard football squad, dropped from an airplane and scoring a direct hit, to finally bring John Donovan to earth.

But, apart from that, Fesler, the fellow who was interviewed, was all-American end at O-hoo-hoo State in 1930; all-Conference basketball guard; star of the baseball team; the leading handballer down country; a mean golfer; and, taking everything in a broad and statesmanlike manner, the very devil of a fellow.

He's a modest, blond, good-looking youngster, who knows his way around a football field, and there is a feeling around and about the Harvard A. A. that he is going to be of great assistance, not only to the football team, but also to the basketball team as well.

FINASTS MEET PALS TONIGHT

The play-off games in the Suburban Twilight League, which were rained out over the week-end, will be played this week. First National Stores and Arlington Pals, which were due to start their three-out-of-five-game series on Saturday, will play their first game tonight at Spy Pond Field, Arlington, at 5.15 o'clock.

In case of rain the game will be played on Wednesday night. The second game of the series will be played at Rich[illegible] Trum field, Somerville, on Thursday night at 5.15 o'clock. The fifth and final game of the series between the Cambridge Red Sox and the North Cambridge K. of C. will be played next Sunday at Russell Field at 3 o'clock.

Arlington Veterans of Foreign Wars will present the Pals with a loving cup tonight in recognition of its fine showing in attaining a play-off berth. The Pals will be strengthened by the return of Jerry Pagliuca, Boston College athlete who led the Cape Cod League in triples for the third successive season. Either Jimmy Powers, of Boston College or Edson "Chippy" Gaw will pitch for the Pals, while Lefty Zampelt or Jimmy Hill will work for First National which is undefeated in five play-off games to date.

PASSAS GETS HIS SHOT AT TITLE

MAGNOLIA WAS COLORFUL REFEREE

By DAMON RUNYON

New York, Sept. 18—Lou Magnolia, dead at the age of 54 of cancer of the throat, was, I thought, a great referee. Certainly one of the best of the modern school that I have ever seen.

By the modern school, I mean that school of referees that works with two judges, and under orders, and sometimes restrictions from boxing commissions.

In the old days a noted referee went all over the country. He was the sole and absolute authority in the ring. Sometimes a debate between fighters over the referee would enliven the sports pages for weeks.

In these times, referees are appointed by boxing commissions in the states that have commissions. An outside referee is rarely permitted. I regret to say that refereeing ability doesn't always figure in the appointment of the referees. The political faith of the appointee sometimes counts in some places.

RULE OF THUMB

There is a set stipend for referees nowadays, and they are uniformed to suit the fancy of their boxing commission. In the old days the famous referees like George Siler, Malachy Hogan, Billy Roche, Eddie Graney, Jack Welsh and Jim Griffin got all the way up to $1000 and expenses.

[illegible] were [illegible] to their own pleasure. Eddie Graney affected a tuxedo. But mostly the referees just peeled there coats and went in there shirt-sleeved. Charley White, the great New York referee, waited until he was in the ring, then took off his coat and sent it sailing over the ropes, a picturesque gesture that the [illegible] loved.

ONE OF BEST

In the old days there was no appeal from the verdict of the referee. In these piping times, instances are of record where decisions of referees and judges have been reversed by officious boxing commissions. Instances are also of record of boxing commissioners climbing into the ring during a bout and telling a referee to do thus and so.

It would have been a pleasure [illegible] to be at the ringside in the [illegible] gent get into the ring and tell Siler, or Graney, or Roche, or Griffin, or White what to do. Yes, or our later day B[illegible] Brown, now himself a boxing commissioner.

The rumor is that he had incurred the displeasure of certain persons of influence in the boxing game by a decision that was undoubtedly 100 per cent honest.

WATCH CITY SCHOOL ELEVEN NEEDS MAINSPRING TO TICK

LEARY SEEKING QUARTERBACK FOR NEW TEAM

By BILL CONNELL

A new machine is ticking along quietly at Waltham as head coach Jack Leary grooms his boys for the rocky road they must travel this football season. Starting with Rindge Tech on Saturday Waltham batters through one of its hardest lists, without much foundation for victory hopes.

The school system requires double sessions in the high school, with sophomores in class afternoons. This gives Leary the boys for only junior and senior years. There is only interclass football of a sort in junior high and the sophs are lucky if they get two days a week of football.

So, whatever the high school players learn, must be absorbed at a rapid rate. That the eleven has been strong year after year is a tribute to Leary's skill as a teacher.

HARDY ASSISTS

This year he has for aides Irad Hardy, recent All-American tackle at Harvard, and Walter Brinn. Hardy works each afternoon but Brinn can give only a couple of days per week. This leaves the bulk of the work up to Leary as general director and backfield coach, while Hardy polishes the line.

A squad of 60 boys are chasing the berths, with five veterans in the fight. A center, end, tackle and two halfbacks are the seasoned entries. There can be found boys to fill every position excepting quarterback. Like having all the parts to make a watch, except a mainspring.

George Ellis, 148-pound center, captains the squad. Not very big but smart and aggressive and a good starter for constructing the eleven. The sole very large boy of the group is right tackle Frank Gaziano, veteran, who weighs 184.

One end is back, Roland Anderson, a 151-pounder. And two backs, wiry Lawrence Harrigan, 138 pounds, and James Falzone, 150. There are the tested performers. A fairly good nucleus though their average weight is only 154 pounds, which is close to the average for the entire team. A bit light for the stiff going of the next 10 weeks.

Tom Gallagher, center; Ernest Schwortzer, guard; Gerald Baumann, tackle; and two fullbacks, Roy Van Wort and James Connolly, saw service last year and each may take a regular job. Perhaps shifted from the positions mentioned to fit them into the picture.

The others who rate as contenders for the first team spots include end Phil Barry, tackle Richard Nelson; guards, Tony Zenox and Herman Stroum; quarterback Henry McMullen and halfback Vic Joss, who has an excellent chance to take over the piloting.

FIRST TEAM SELECTIONS

The starting eleven tentatively has Capt. Ellis at center; Schwortzer and Zeno or Stroum, guards; Gaziano and Baumann, tackles; Anderson and Barry, ends; Joss, quarterback; Harrigan and Falzone, halfbacks, and Connolly or Van Wort, fullback.

"We'll use the huddle," said Coach Leary today. "Without an experienced quarterback signal calling would be dangerous. It's to early to tell just how strong or weak we'll be. If we can get off to a good start against Rindge Tech it will be encouraging."

Jack scowled meditatively as he thought then of the list—Rindge, Maynard, Somerville, Haverhill, Revere, Lynn English, Watertown, Medford, Newton and Brockton. Just one headache after another. You'd think the grind would be tiresome, especially for a coach of Leary's standing, for he has been at Waltham 14 years. The query was popped at him. He laughed.

"I hope to be there for 14 years more," he replied. "Football is hard, but it never becomes tiresome. Hockey and baseball are easier, and they're enjoyable, too."

Then he was away to dress for practice.

His team won't win any state titles this fall. But it won't be any setup, either. And when the records are printed, at 1933 journey's end, you'll find the Waltham win sign after a majority of the ten tough contests.

N.B.A. SEEK NEW AGREEMENT

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 19 (AP) One of the standing jokes of boxing was tottering today as the National Boxing Association awaited solicited approval of a plan to agree on world's champions and have one list of title holders instead of two.

In a [illegible] here the N. B. A. voted last night to ask New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and California to sanction a working agreement for handling general ring affairs, especially concerning the champions in the various divisions.

[illegible] Brown [illegible] N. B. A. president [illegible] termed the [illegible] stride toward elimination of a very severe headache." He added that the N. B. A. could not hope for direct affiliation with the four states as, he said, the existing political set-up precludes this.

"But," continued Brown, "we are willing to concede that it is our duty to suggest that a working agreement will put the N. B. A. and the four states as close as possible in all angles of the ring game."

The convention which last night backed up Mississippi and Kansas in their demands that Jack Dempsey be suspended until he makes restitution to promoters in those two states for losses because of Dempsey's unfilled refereeing dates was ready today to act on several proposals.

These included non-recognition of championship fights of less than 15 rounds duration, labeling as exhibitions matches where champions come in overweight, greater protection for amateurs, bonding of promoters and withdrawal from the International Boxing Union.

Sharkey's Comeback Ruined by Levinsky

By JACK CONWAY

Chicago, Sept. 18—Hail King Levinsky! [illegible] Kingfish of the Ghetto section of Chicago, is today on a new [illegible] throne as a result of his victory over Jack Sharkey, former world champion, in a furious 10-round bout before 20,000 persons at Comiskey Park.

Levinsky won five rounds, Sharkey three and two were even.

The decision of referee Phil Co[illegible] and Judges Batty and Kline was unanimous for the colorful Kingfish. Under the Illinois system of scoring Levinsky received 55 points from Referee Co[illegible] against 4[illegible] for Sharkey. Judge Kline gave Levinsky 58 points and 41 for Sharkey while Judge Batty gave Levinsky 53 points and 47 points for Sharkey, total 161 for Kingfish and 136 points for the former champion.

DROPS SHARKEY FOR SIX

When he came up Levinsky swarmed all over Sharkey belting him with terrific right and left hard blows to head and body. The former champion was in distress but he proved he could come up off the floor fighting. At the gong at the end of the first round Sharkey was blazing away with both hooks at the infuriated Levinsky.

Levinsky continued to set the pace in the second and third rounds. Sharkey began to find himself in the fourth round. He staggered Levinsky with a left hook to the head and slowed him down with body punching. In close Levinsky pounded Sharkey in the body. The fourth round was even as was the fifth.

Sharkey's superior boxing gave him an edge in the sixth and seventh. Jack popped a left to the face and made Levinsky miss. Both men were very tired in the eighth round. Levinsky forced the fight but took many short punches to body.

KING BREEZES IN

Late in the tenth round Levinsky made his big effort. With both fists flying he drove Sharkey partly through the ropes under a body attack, the referee finally broke them apart and they were in a clinch at the final gong.

Levinsky's victory was received by the Chicago [illegible]. Sharkey in defeat walked [illegible] congratulated the King [illegible] complimented him on his [illegible] ability. He waved [illegible] the crowd and tossed kisses [illegible] ringside.

JACK ADMITS LICKING

Back in the dressing room Sharkey was frank in admitting Levinsky beat him. But [illegible] he convinced everyone [illegible] come up off the floor fighting [illegible] said he is ready to come [illegible] Chicago and meet Levinsky [illegible].

Buckley Says Jack Sharkey Robbed

Philadelphia, Sept. 19 (AP)—Despite the Boston battler's defeat by King Levinsky, Jack Sharkey is picked—by his manager Johnny Buckley—to stop Tommy Loughran, former light heavyweight champion, in the first five rounds of their bout here September 27.

In a telegram from Chicago, scene of the former heavyweight champion's latest setback, Buckley said Sharkey is leaving for Philadelphia today.

"He licked Levinsky easily and should have been given the decision," the message said. "Would have stopped Levinsky in two more rounds. Sharkey in good condition. He did not get a scratch in Levinsky bout.

"Will stop Loughran inside of five rounds, then fight Baer in Miami in February."

Although Eddie Casey's new offense designed to lift the Crimson out of the doldrums into which it dropped a year ago has been guarded as dark and cherished secret, it remained for Eddie himself to expose his hand when he selected varsity this morning.

Fiery Semi-Final Set for Brouillard-Heuser Go

By DAVID F. EGAN

The attractiveness of the Lou Brouillard-Adolph Heuser two-man riot, which is scheduled for the Garden Friday night, has been diminished not one French or German whit by the fact that the Messrs. Tony Celli of Leominster and Johnny Risso of Worcester have been signed for the semi-final match.

Many months ago, when boxing was in the complete doldrums, Billy Ames, the fighter, had an idea. It seems that Mr. Ames is always having ideas. So he conceived a New Talent tournament, designed to bring young fighters out of the shrubs and uplands in which they had been grazing; expose them to the public gaze and possibly develop some new fighters for New England.

They were middleweights. They were young. They were natural rivals. So they were matched for a main bout by the Cycle A. C., of which Sam'l Snyder was the presiding officer, and they had evil intentions against one another on several occasions, but it rained. It always rains in Revere when a boxing bout or a bicycle race is scheduled, so it was no surprise.

Like the Arab, however, Sam'l Snyder quietly folded his tent and disappeared when the summer season ended, and Mr. Will-yum Ames stuck in his long, bony paw and grabbed what should be one of the best semifinal bouts in months.

GREENE FORMS NEW TEXTILE COMPANY

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor, Boston American

For the first time in many months, announcement is made today of the formation of an important new textile organization. It will be known as the Enderley [illegible], organized under New York laws, for the purpose of furnishing a contact between the textile industry and investment bankers. [illegible] Greene, who [illegible] the chief executive of Pacific Mills, second largest textile [illegible] in the country and for 25 years the executive head of Lockwood, Greene & Co., which became one of the largest engineering [illegible] industrial field, will be president of Enderley Corp.

Besides acting as contact between the industry and investment bankers, Enderley Corp. will [illegible] reports and [illegible] engineering and managerial problems in the textile industry and act as broker in textile securities. It will also act as broker in the sale of textile mill properties [illegible] curing capital for reorganizations, aid in effecting consolidations and take options and participations in special syndicates within limits and furnish the [illegible] capital often necessary to start meritorious enterprises.

Mr. Greene has been actively identified in organization, financing and management of many industrial companies, especially in textiles. For years he and his partners managed textile companies employing over 25,000 and doing a yearly business of above $100,000,000.

Report that Thomas Chadbourne, head of the sugar price stabilization movement had entered the textile field was evidently due to a confusion of names. This was in connection with election of William M. Chadbourne, prominent New York lawyer, business man and politician to the board of directors of Bruck Silk Mills, Ltd., announced on behalf of the board by I. L. Bruck, president of the company. In April, 1932, Mr. Chadbourne gained considerable prominence for his economic treatise "The Depression—Its Causes and the Way Out," in which he advocated the adoption of the methods of science in meeting the economic effects of the business depression. A graduate of Harvard University, Mr. Chadbourne was admitted to the New York Bar in 1904.

Rise in Deposits is Notable

The accompanying chart presents one reason for the extreme conservatism of the banks. The broken [illegible] total of United States Postal Savings and the time deposits of Federal [illegible]. It should be noted that the scales for the two lines are distinct and that the drop in the time deposits of [illegible] exactly [illegible]

However, the changes do illustrate a trend. The serious casualties suffered by the commercial banks of this country not only during the period [illegible] depression [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] use of the United States Postal Savings system.

Particularly [illegible] deposits [illegible] place during the [illegible] and a half years. Not a dollar of deposits in postal savings has been lost. The losses in member bank deposits have not yet been determined but they will undoubtedly prove to be [illegible].

The secret of deposit security in postal savings is the fact that [illegible] and then fully secured by United States Government collateral. Latterly this procedure has been [illegible] postal system has been compelled to purchase government bonds directly with the deposits entrusted to it.

Now deposits in a sense are the life line of banks. They cannot succeed [illegible] funds in their care. The banks know very well that they can minimize loans and [illegible] investments in government bonds. They may impair their earnings and it may also force them to reduce the interest paid on deposits. However, if depositors insist upon security that is one way of obtaining it.

The banks [illegible] own existence and not wishing to lose their deposits to a government system have [illegible] pursuing a policy which would tend to preserve them.

It would seem, therefore, that if the government wishes banks to expand credit under the NRA program some formula of loan insurance will have to be evolved.

AMSTER WANTS UNIFICATION

New York, Sept. 19.—Contending that the first year's operation of the Eighth ave. subway cost the city 12½ cents per passenger carried interest charges alone, Nathan L. A study of the Interborough Rapid Transit report and the report of board of transportation for the [illegible] Mr. Amster states, corroborates his repeated [illegible] subway's operation would affect only the city's income on its investment in the old subways and not the companies' fixed annual preferentials.

Grains Turn Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Many nervous changes fractionally above and below $1.00 a bushel for May delivery of wheat were later followed by a downward swing of more than two cents a bushel from $1.00⅝. Corn as well as wheat tumbled more than two cents. Pressure on the corn market was apparent from the outset today, and was attributed largely to liberal receipts, 207 cars today against 124 a week ago and 98 at this time last year. Oats gave way with wheat and corn.

Best increase over a year ago was in movement of forest products. Grain and grain products were up slightly, but merchandise and miscellaneous freight showed decreases.

Capital Financing and Securities Bill

The [illegible] lack of capital financing in this country, except for the government's efforts under the public works bill, is attracting growing attention. Even foreign economists are pointing out the need, so well recognized in this country, for a resumption of the flow of funds into capital improvements which require financing on a long-term basis. So far, the securities bill, passed at last session of Congress has proved an insuperable obstacle. Increasing study of the measure in important quarters is revealing further difficulties in financing under it, but it is still possible that there will be a break in the jam which has held back important financing.

Hopeful on New Haven Outlook

While New Haven officials are not overly optimistic on the outlook they feel that the road in September will be out of the "red." August was a fair month, but it showed a loss. On the basis of expectations of traffic for the balance of the year officials anticipate that the New Haven in the [illegible] quarter will be in the "black."

Increased maintenance expenditures which a number of carriers are making are eating into [illegible] improved revenues, carriers are reporting.

President L. M. Baldwin of Missouri Pacific pointed out that since July the road had been spending roughly $300,000 a month more on maintenance than was spent in the corresponding months of 1932. While those expenditures mean lower operating income, they will be reflected in improved operating efficiency and in a general betterment of the property.

Code Helps Singer Sales

One effect of the adoption of codes in the garment and other trades has been to boost the sales of sewing machines. With weekly working hours cut down by the provisions of the code, additional workers and sewing machines have been necessary to keep up business volume. In the past few weeks this has meant a sharp step-up in business for Singer Sewing Machine, according to reports.

Oil Price Fixing Schedule Imminent

Oil stock circles expected announcement of the government's fixed price for oils would be made within the next two days. Inasmuch as price cutting in the past has been one of the main reasons for the instability of earnings power among leading petroleum producers, any correction of that evil, resulting in the elimination of losses due to such practices, is viewed favorably by the speculative element. Rumors were to the effect that the new prices would be $1.11 for midcontinent against 69 cents at present and $1.17 East Texas. Reports of 25 cents a gallon retail gasoline were heard in connection with the new oil program.

H. G. Lapham Out As Texas Corp. Director

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Management of the Texas Corp., $500,000,000 oil concern, under fire from an independent group of stockholders for exercising control while holding but a small interest in the company, today announced the addition of three new directors said to represent some of the largest holdings in the corporation.

At the same time it was announced that Henry G. Lapham of Boston had resigned his directorship. J. P. Lapham of San Antonio, Tex., however, remains as a director and chairman of the executive committee.

The opposing group of stockholders, headed by J. E. Crosbie of Tulsa and joined in its opposition by E. C. Holmes, a director who resigned as chairman of the company last May following internal friction, charged that the "Lapham family" group and associates had become dominant in the management, although holding less than 2 per cent of the stock. In letters sent to the some 90,000 stockholders yesterday, Holmes urged that 12 additional directors be added to the present 13, and a special meeting of stockholders be called Oct. 24 to vote on the plan.

The three new directors added today were Lester J. Norris of St. Charles, Ill., said to be a direct representative of the estate of John W. Gates, one of the founders, William H. Mitchell of Chicago, son of the late John J. Mitchell, who was a director from 1910 until his death six years ago, and Walker G. Dunnington, a representative of the Mrs. Hill and the estate of the late James M. Hill, who was a director from 1913 until his death last year.

Places on the board for the three new directors were made by the resignation of Lapham and by enlarging the membership from 13 to 15.

INFLATION SPUR NEEDED NOW, SAYS HANEY

Pickup in Building Activity Noted by Economist

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, Sept. 19.—Business activity continues to decline, according to the latest weekly figures although hopes of a pickup later in [illegible] are not abandoned.

Steel production was off again last [illegible] reported [illegible]. The price of steel scrap [illegible] weakness in [illegible] demand.

Electrical power production made a somewhat poorer showing. Even coal production after the spurt which was caused by buying in anticipation of strikes, showed a decrease.

Preliminary August figures for the composite of industrial activity were off about 8 per cent from July, due allowance being made for the merely seasonal factors. And my [illegible] line barometer was down a little for the month, though not enough to warrant a definitely unfavorable forecast.

The volume of general business has slackened perceptibly. The most general measure of this is found in "bank debits" or the volume of checks drawn against individual accounts. This figure is now 11 per cent lower than a year ago, despite the fact that prices are higher than then.

Even retail trade has suffered somewhat, partly owing to bad weather and partly to the anticipation of requirements by consumers in August.

Commodity prices, however, were mostly strong, and the weekly averages registered new highs for the year. This may be taken as evidence that inflation has taken effect. It indicates an actual depreciation of the dollar and fears of more to come.

The dollar got farther and farther away from gold. This was apparent both in the sharp rise in the price of gold and in the fall of the dollar in foreign exchange.

One result is that a steady withdrawal of foreign capital from this country is reported and estimates place the amount at around $700,000,000.

Most of the attention is now focused upon the moves toward further inflation. Many believe that the administration wants to issue greenbacks, and is seeking to forestall the demand for them by pushing "credit expansion."

The administration is not yet ready to revalue the dollar on a definite gold base. Not only are prices not up as high as it desires but fluctuations give a better basis for manipulating our economic life.

But Congress is coming. It will take much more success with bank credit inflation than has yet been seen to stave off Senator Thomas and others who believe as he does.

Inflation Talk Is Not Influencing State St. Traders

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Despite the fact that inflation is here, there, and, in fact, most everywhere in the Boston financial district, something seems to be acting as a drag on the buying of astute traders. This is considered contrary to the rules by many who insist on going into a frenzy every time the word is mentioned. They do not seem to grasp the significance of the market's ability to discount developments in advance of their happening.

Unless all the signs are wrong, equity prices have discounted whatever inflationary measures are under consideration at the current writing. To some it is increasingly obvious that further [illegible] must be predicated on earnings. Apparently more time is required for the market to weigh the outlook for profits, if one is to judge by its reluctance to zip through the [illegible] of late August.

RAIL ACTION IS REVIEWED

While the [illegible] have slipped slightly under the [illegible] during the July reaction it is really the rails that are disturbing to experienced observers. This is the group that was most heavily tipped [illegible] mid-August and it may be that it is requiring more time to correct an over-bought condition. But there are also indications of smart selling.

Although the [illegible] specific bull intention here we do not look on them in a particularly bearish light. Unless the list as a whole falls apart they should do nothing other than drift around in an [illegible] fashion. Their critical level is 48-49. It should not be broken if this view is to [illegible]

[illegible] the barometer has [illegible] ed a mixed picture since Saturday, but accurately suggesting the type of market action witnessed. In order for a definite bull signal to be given the rails must cross 50.75 while the industrials hold above 104.50. Should the latter break down while the rails refuse to rally a bear signal will result.

Notes: Some of the boys are back from Chicago. . . . They seem to have done a little business at the same time they took in the fair. . . . All judged by the sudden revival of pointers on the packers. . . . Armour issues are talked about plenty, but we have a sneaky suspicion the Wilson shares are the one the [illegible] will be in.

More notes: Great Western Sugar is supposed to be on the way to 55. . . All to the tune of $5 per share earnings for this year . . . Good company but our information says inventory mark-ups will make this showing possible . . . So what about next year is the slogan of careful buyers. . . One big traders house is reported as selling motors during recent strength.

The much despised utilities have found a friend. Not too staunch a one as yet, but none-the-less a friend. A large statistical and advisory service is out with buy recommendations on American Tel. and Columbia Gas. This is a start in the right direction, as this sort of interest usually breeds other interest.

WHY FORD HAS REFUSED TO DO NRA BIDDING

Auto Leader Is Always Individualist in Operations

By B. C. FORBES

New York, Sept. 19.—Henry Ford doubtless was assured by his lawyer that there isn't one word on the statute books about any Blue Eagle nor one line demanding that he must sign any code whatsoever.

B. C. Forbes

From the time Henry Ford launched his first car he has consistently been an individualist. He has consistently [illegible] refused to take orders from Wall Street or elsewhere. He has consistently adhered to being his own boss. He has consistently persisted in doing things his own way.

[illegible] Ford [illegible] to the [illegible] of the NRA [illegible] things would happen to him, Mr. Ford replied temperately but pointedly:

"I have always thought that anyone who assumes to say how a business should be run ought to know something about it."

There is no large industrialist in America who knows more about [illegible] than Mr. Ford and [illegible] is none less influenced by the opinions of associate executives than Mr. Ford. Nor is there [illegible]

A. P. Sloan, president of General Motors, perhaps sized up Mr. Ford's attitude correctly the other day, in these words:

Mr. Sloan happens to be constituted very differently from Mr. Ford. Years ago he told me, "I never give orders." He explained that, unless those responsible for carrying out a proposed policy could be convinced of its wisdom, the policy was not rushed into effect, since he regarded teamwork as essential to the successful functioning of any huge enterprise. Mr. Sloan revealed something of his attitude the other day when he added to his comment about Mr. Ford:

"To tell you candidly, I don't like it much myself. But when the others are signing, I think it is only fair to do likewise."

The NRA's attempted brow-beating of Ford has not elicited universal approval. One workman writes:

"I hear General Johnson will boycott Henry Ford. I would like to ask General Johnson what Mr. Ford ever did to deserve this treatment from the United States of America. Let us look at Mr. Ford's record down through the years. We see that Mr. Ford was paying higher daily wages and for shorter hours than others. We see he was paying minimum wages of 50 cents per hour before the NRA while others were paying less. We see Mr. Ford starting mass production of automobiles, bringing the price down within reach of the average man, therefore greatly increasing the wealth and prosperity of this country."

The other view of Ford's stand is hit off in a cartoon which shows him employing a huge pair of scissors to cut off his own nose. And the caption is, "But Why?"

Gold Price $31.64, or 20 Cents Higher

Washington, Sept. 19 (INS).—The price of gold today was announced by the treasury as $31.64 per ounce, as compared with $31.44 yesterday.

French Gold Position Is Viewed as Strong

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—The financial position of France, citadel of the gold standard in this era of bobbing paper currencies, is [illegible] ing Wall Street's closest and somewhat anxious attention.

What will happen if France abandons the gold standard?

Well-informed international bankers assert this question, at least for the moment, is academic; that indications of any immediate change in the status of the gold franc are lacking. It is acknowledged that if France fails to balance her budget this autumn and dollars and pounds continue to decline in terms of gold the position of the franc might become difficult.

Some analysts express the opinion that dislodging the franc from gold, (and it is taken for granted that if the franc goes the other gold currencies will follow) would bring a sharp rise in the dollar in relation to most currencies, which in turn might depress commodity prices in American markets.

A contrasting view is that a world-wide inflation movement would follow, that lacking stable currencies the world would rush to put its wealth into commodities. [illegible] American price [illegible] affected by the ratio of the dollar to the gold currencies, that it is the ratio of the dollar to sterling that is important in governing American price levels.

Important financial quarters in both Paris and New York assert none of the chief forces which toppled the dollar and the pound from the gold standard appear to exist in France.

Bank of England was forced to suspend gold payments in September of 1931 by heavy withdrawals of foreign balances, which had depleted its gold reserve.

The chief factor in suspension of gold payments by the Federal Reserve system, taking the United States off the gold standard was the [illegible] gold, which developed coincident with the banking crisis last March.

Gold coin no longer circulates in France, and withdrawals must be in bullion, in bars of about $5000 each.

New Stock Exchange Plans Are in Making

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Plans for the establishment of a new stock exchange at an undesignated location in New Jersey to take over a substantial part of the business of the New York Stock Exchange wer under consideration today by two separate groups affiliated with the exchange.

The latest move, announced today, is being sponsored by 12 of the leading exchange firms. A few days ago another independent group, seeking a means of escape from the transfer and gross profits taxes which the city proposes to levy on the security business, filed in New Jersey incorporation papers for the National Stock Exchange.

The new organization, if finally perfected, it was understood, will be closely affiliated with the New York Stock Exchange, although the exchange itself has thus far taken no active part in its formation.

Information respecting the probable location of the new exchange, and the time necessary to complete organization plans was not immediately available, but it was expected that a statement would be issued by the stock exchange late today.

Several sites in Newark and other cities in New Jersey within the metropolitan area are said to have been prefered to the organizers.

Those behind the latest project have formed "the committee on organization of New Jersey Stock Exchange." This body is composed of representatives of the following exchange firms: De Coppet & Doremus; Fenner, eBane & Ungerleider; Jacquelin & De oCppet; E. A. Pierce Co.; Charles D. Barney & Co.; Post & Flagg & Paine; Webber & Co.; Carlisle, Mellick & Co.; Moore & Schley; Hornblower & Weeks; J. S. Bache & Co. and Winthrop-Mitchell & Co.

The law firm of Caldwalader, Wickersham & Taft has been retained by the organizers to study the legal questions connected with the exchange.

LEADERS DROP, BUT COME UP FROM LOWS

New York, Sept. 19—Leading shares on the New York Stock Exchange dropped 1 to 3 points today, then came up from their lows, but still showed setbacks over a wide list in the final hour.

There was actually little to account for the erratic movements of stocks. The share market was only moderately irregular during the first hour, but there was a sharp and rather weird break in the second which flooded the list with losses.

For half an hour the selling was fast. Then short covering steadied the leaders. Moderate rallying retrieved some of the more severe declines. The activity, however, dwindled noticeably on the recovery.

The sudden relapse apparently found no answer in brokerage circles. Grains and cotton were barely steady. The dollar, while a bit easier, displayed some resistance in foreign exchange dealings. Bonds were again heavy.

Most of the mining shares sagged with the rest of the market and the volatile Homestake slumped 20 points at one time. Noranda, however, managed to get up a point. Freeport Texas and Texas Gulf Sulphur were up 1 to 2 points and the oils were not too depressed.

In the first hour prices were irregular but variations tended to narrow as volume contracted. Oils and tobaccos displayed rallying tendencies at times but were adversely influenced by easiness in utilities and rails. A number of industrials were slightly reactionary while metal shares ruled irregularly higher.

Losses of major fractions to around a point or so were shown in American Can, U. S. Smelting, Pennsylvania, New York Central, Consolidated Gas and North American. Homestake Mining cancelled most of an opening 6-point advance.

Allied Chemical, Noranda and Dome showed one point gains, while Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, American Tobacco B, McIntyre, Liggett & Myers B and General Motors were steady. U. S. Steel and American Telephone slipped slightly.

In the second hour railroad shares as a group displayed acute weakness with New York Central, Atchison, Lackawanna and Southern Railway being sold in volume and losing from fractions to about 2 points. Union Pacific dipped sharply in light trading.

Gold mining shares turned somewhat easier on the selling wave with Homestake always a volatile performer, losing more than 20 points before meeting with support. Cerro de Pasco and Alaska Juneau dipped fractionally.

United States Steel and the other steel shares, including Bethlehem lost from fractions to about 2 points and showed little signs of aggressive support.

In the third hour shares rallied from their earlier lows, but finished the period with setbacks of a point or two all along the line. Industrial Rayon was down almost 4 points. Texas Gulf Sulphur was up 2 points.

U. S. Smelting was off more than 2 points with Atchison. J. I. Case was down 2. Point or more setbacks showed for U. S. Steel, Goodyear, American Telephone, Allied Chemical, American Can, American Commercial Alcohol, Consolidated Gas of New York, and du Pont.

The important leaders continued in the fourth hour to show losses of a point or 2. Homestake Mining was off 7. Crown Cork sagged 2⅜, Pennsylvania 2⅛ and Penney 2⅛.

J. I. Case was off 2 points. Shares down a point or more included U. S. Smelting, U. S. Steel, New York Central, National Distillers, Eastman Kodak, American Telephone, Allied Chemical and Consolidated Gas.

"Switching" and "hedging" were two words frequently heard in the discussions of market observers. Both were supposed to account to a large extent for the spasmodic declines in various stock groups.

Many investors and traders were said to be basing their operations on the assumption that currency inflation is a certainty and have been getting out of issues that may not be benefited by this development and into ones that stand a chance of substantial improvement.

Sales to 2 p. m., approximated 1,780,000 shares.

Textile Betterment Seen by Marchant

T. M. Marchant, president of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, declared there has been a decided improvement in textile business during the past week. Recently he had predicted many mills would be forced to shut down because of restricted buying and increased cost of operation resulting from cotton processing tax.

Exchange Seat Sells Off $50,000

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—The price of New York Stock Exchange memberships took a sharp drop today. Arrangements were made for sale of a seat at $150,000, off $50,000 from the previous transaction announced several weeks ago.

Treasury Offering Is Oversubscribed

Subscriptions to offering of $100,000,000 Treasury 91-day bills totaled $256,720,000; awarded on average interest rate of 11-100ths of 1 per cent on bank discount basis.

Ship Conference Threatened

New York, Sept. 19—Unless a compromise is reached on fares charged for passages on cabin and first-class ships in the North Atlantic trade, several companies threaten to resign from the North Atlantic passenger conference.

Humble Oil Easing Price

Retroactive to September 8, an advance of five cents a barrel has been made by Humble Oil & Refining Company in crude oil prices in Gray County, Texas Panhandle. New schedule meets that of Phillips Petroleum Company, ranges from 69 cents for 34 degrees gravity to 81 cents on 40 gravity and above. Texas Company also has met the advance, making it effective September 18.

Michigan Employment Gains

Detroit, September 19—Michigan industrial employment on August 15 showed an increase of 5.8 per cent over a month previous and was 17.7 per cent ahead of the corresponding date last year, according to report of 475 Michigan manufacturing establishments to the State bureau of labor statistics. Dollar payrolls of these concerns on August 15 were 8 per cent higher than on July 15 and 29.1 per cent larger than on August 15, 1932.

Directors of Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Co. authorized redemption Oct. 10, 1933, of $1,000,000 of two-year 6 per cent notes, due Aug. 1, 1934. This will reduce the original $13,500,000 issue to $8,500,000.

West Point Again Paying Dividends

West Point Manufacturing Co. declared a dividend of $1 and an "extra" of $1, both payable October 2 to stock of record September 18. Last payment was $1 quarterly on Jan. 2, 1932.

Howe Sound Co.'s Dividend Larger

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—Howe Sound Co., a copper producer, today lifted its annual dividend basis to $1 from 40 cents previously paid. Directors declared a quarterly div-

Westinghouse Is Building House for Efficiency

Mansfield, O., Sept. 19—Work was started today on the erection of a home of efficiency, planned by engineers of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., to bring the "New Deal" to housewives.

Fruition of 30 years of research and manufacture, which has been estimated to represent an investment in excess of $10,000,000, the new home will be so built and equipped as to provide housewives with working hours not unlike those embraced in the blanket code of the NRA.

For the present the new home will be known as the "House of Mystery," according to V. G. Vaughan, Westinghouse engineer, under whose direction the home was developed.

"It will be mysterious only to the extent," said Mr. Vaughan, "that for the next several months, very few people, these including Westinghouse executives and some suppliers, will know the details of this house. Until we are ready to open it sometime in December we will keep its features to ourselves."

Recovery in Business Led by 'New Dealers'

New York, Sept. 19 (INS)—Coincident with the "new deal" in national politics, Wall Street and industry in general have cut in the poker game of business their own set of "new dealers," quite apart from those placed at the table by Washington.

There are twelve of these "new dealers." Some have taken the place of 1929 boom boys in the game. Others have been invited into the select circle, while still others have elbowed their way in.

They are:

Winthrop Williams Aldrich, brother-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who succeeded that old dealer, Albert Henry Wiggin, as chief of the Chase.

Landon K. Thorpe, ex-head of Bonbright & Co., and now the dominant stock interest in Morgan's old bank—the Bankers Trust—as well as director of the Baker's First National.

James Paul Warburg, son of that shrewd old fashioned banker, Paul Moritz Warburg, who was cut into the big time game largely by the President's leaning on him as a financial adviser.

Errett Lobban Cord, the Auburn automobile man who has branched out into aviation and ship building, as well as the stock market.

Floyd Bostwick Odlum, the Utah boy who became a protege of old Sidney Zollicoffer Mitchell and then piled up investment trust profits through the last four years.

David Meriwether Milton, son-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who in six months has risen to No. 3 man in the trust field.

Sewell Avery, the U. S. Gypsum man, whom Morgan's put on U. S. Steel's board and at the head of Montgomery Ward. His status as a new dealer is now under fire from stockholders.

George Henry Howard, former Vermonter and a corporation lawyer, who heads the United Corp. and is Odlum's partner in Atlas Corp.

George Whitney, of the Boston, but not the horsey clan, who has become No. 2 man in the firm of J. P. Morgan, supplanting Thomas W. Lamont. His brother is the Stock Exchange president, whose rights as a new dealer may be challenged at the next big board election.

N. E. BUYS NOW AT WHITE'S JUBILEE

Boston shoppers have taken Old Man Depression for a one-way ride, speaking in the vernacular of those double-breasted coated gentlemen who flash suave miens but neatly pack guns.

Prosperity is no longer "just around the corner." It has already turned that crucial angle of devastating uncertainty and is now merrily far on its way along the avenue of returned purchasing power and earning capacity.

CO-OPERATE WITH NRA

Judging from the huge throngs crowding R. H. White Co. for their Diamond Jubilee sale, marking the 75th anniversary of this department store's founding, "happy days are here again."

Happy shoppers with larded purses and long lists of personal and household necessities, patronizing the bargains of the White's Diamond Jubilee menu, are manifesting co-operation with the President's NRA program.

Ever since the anniversary sale opened at White's last Thursday, there has been one continuous stream of purchasers concretely availing themselves of the lower prices of the important present.

The store management announced that the sales returns are "far beyond expectation." The figures are far in advance of those of last year, they report.

People are anxious to save, to take advantage of September bargains under the terms of the NRA program that to buy now means the creation of a job for the head of some family.

That it is a sane response to a vital issue was stated by White executives who pointed out that huge throngs don't attempt to break down the doors at the morning opening, to push through angry mobs for first-come first-served bargains. They report a progressive increase of customers daily with the middle of the afternoon showing the peak of the business.

Which goes to show, they add, that this is a healthy determination on the part of the buying public "to buy while the buying is good."

1100 GIVEN EMPLOYMENT

As part of their compliance with the President's program, R. H. White Co. have added 1100 to their selling force to handle the needs of interested and willing customers. That there is money and that those who have it are perfectly in accord that they must spend it to circulate it is clearly seen in the rising figures of stock and sales of this department store.

For this gigantic birthday sale, the department store spent thousands of dollars in decorations, effective lighting systems, and renovated departments, creating jobs in keeping with the economic campaign of the nation.

"A dollar saved is a dollar earned."

Expensive as well as inexpensive items had an attractive and more-than-satisfying turnover, the store officials said.

"The old-fashion economic theory of supply and demand still holds good," they added, "and Boston shoppers who are doing their part to buy now will be supplied with bargains and values for as long as they desire. As a department store we are following Gen. Johnson's edict for created employment."

"Music in the Air" Reopens Colonial, Great Audience Hailing its Triumph

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

The spirit of the Auld Lang Syne of showmanship settled over the Colonial last night, and made its re-opening a matter of distinction, both as to theater prosperity and musical drama success. It was an Old Timers evening. From craftsmen of line and lyric, from the cast and from the orchestra, came a contribution of old time operetta in its sweetest and gayest moods. From the audience came the response of warm appreciation, and "Music in the Air" stepped to the head of the "legit" class. For thoroughly pleasing the eye and the ear, I hand it the palm in its own type.

* * *

There is the cunning of the veteran touch at every hand. Old Timers to weave, and Old Timers to wear, and "sell" this show coat of many colors. For several years it has been the habit to cry up youth; but the triumph of "Music in the Air" is as much the paean of experience, even age, in show business, as it is of showmanship itself. The theme itself harks back to another era: in essentials it is operetta of ye olden days. But so varied are its elements that it can be laid under no heading; the program styles it a "musical adventure in two acts."

Yet it is odd assortment of threads, cleverly blended—broad-bladed satire outstanding, even a bit from the circus, as in the antics of the trained bear. All these are set above a current of as exquisite music as the American stage has had in half a dozen blue moons.

Farce in Theme

The locale is Bavaria, country and city. Idyllic scenes fade into settings of metropolitan sophistication. Yokels from the village mingle with folk of the world, and the humor becomes one of contrast, as well as the sparkling fun of dialogue and hilarious situation. An old composer, along with his comely daughter and her boorish swain, takes his creature of sharps and flats to Munich, for a hearing by an old pal, now a great producer.

That involves the visitors in a farcical love affair of a playwright and a prima donna; and the satirical thrusts through these passages, playing the rapier and the broader slapstick upon backstage folk, are pure dramatic gold. They give the production the excellence of being to show business what "Of Thee I Sing" was to the nation's politics.

Of the players, Donald Brian was a delight, singing well and catching the full character of the coxcomb playwright. Walter Slezak was grand as the rustic lover. Al Shean and Reinald Werrenrath, Desiree Tabor and Ann Barrie, were among the stars that shone brightly; in a bit part, Miss Dorothy Johnson captivated, and later the same fortune fell to Ivy Scott. Speech and song were equally well taken care of; haunting melodies teemed, and the chorus was entirely acceptable.

Music Is Real Gem

Through the whole gleams true to stardust merit. I am willing to accord the chief honors to Jerome Kern for the music. It is matchless among American tone output for the footlights in some years. You may explore your adjectives for the superlatives to appraise its worth. The best is none too good.

For the book and lyrics we may thank Oscar Hammerstein, II; his job is skilfully done. This was the last scenic designing of the lamented genius, Joseph Urban, and the glorious color is his panegyric. At every angle A. C. Blumenthal has spared naught to give this unique musical drama conception the full brilliance of a master feat.

Such are the varied charms of "Music in the Air" that I could sit through it again and again and again, and enjoy it to my utmost each time.

And so gorgeous is its music that I could close my eyes and let that sweet river of harmony give me a whole evening's entertainment by itself.

All Sweet

Opera Starts Its Boom

Grand opera's success last summer in Manhattan was the wonder of the show year. It looks as if it were going to repeat in Boston. When the Boston Opera House box office and the branch at 120 Boylston st. opened there were lines waiting and the rush kept up.

Perhaps it is just Boston's known love for that style of entertainment; perhaps the low prices have something to do with it. Anyway, Maestro Alfredo Salmaggi seems to have been correct in thinking his repertory would triumph here beginning next Monday.

New Play Here

Blanche Yurka and company, in comedy, "Spring in Autumn" by the Spanish dramatist, Gregorio Martinez-Sierra, will open at the Tremont tonight. This first performance of Miss Yurka's play will serve to inaugurate the Tremont Theater Opening Night Club. MOVIE USHERS EJECT LINCOLN KIRSTEIN

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—Lincoln Kirstein, young intellectual from Boston, has had a new experience—that of being "bounced" by two movie ushers, because of an artistic protest.

Kirstein, editor of "Hound and Horn" and son of a leading Boston merchant, went to a special film showing last night to protest what he considers "butchery" of Sergei Eisenstein's picture "Thunder Over Mexico."

Before he could get very far with his protest, two ushers not only showed him the door, but pushed him through it.

BACKED BY SINCLAIR

The film "Thunder Over Mexico" has aroused a raging controversy in artistic circles. Eisenstein, famous Russian director, spent 14 months in Mexico taking 200,000 feet of film for the picture. That was too much for Upton Sinclair, the novelist, who helped back the venture financially and who insists that Eisenstein spent more time and money during the filming than was expected.

Sinclair turned the 200,000 feet over to a Hollywood producer to be cut and released in three separate features and several short subjects. This aroused some observers, including Kirstein, who felt that Sinclair had made art subordinate to money.

KIRSTEIN PROTESTS

When the time came for a special showing of the film last night at the New School for Social Research, Kirstein was there, distributing leaflets, declaring:

When Helen Woodward, friend of Sinclair, gave a little speech before the picture was to start, Kirstein arose and inquired whether he could ask a question. Mrs. Woodward said questions would be welcome, but before he could ask any, the ushers, imported from a Broadway movie cathedral, were on the scene. They deftly deposited Kirstein outside.

Mayor John D. Devir (left) turned the key to officially open Morgan Furniture Company's new Malden store yesterday morning. Sidney Rogal (right), vice-president of Morgan's, presented the key to the mayor.

The new store, which will be managed by Arthur Toga, was designed by Arland A. Dirlam. The main floor is devoted to the parlor suites, dining room suites, bed room suites, and radio department. Rugs, linoleum, refrigerators, oil burners and bedding are displayed in the basement.

In conjunction with its merchandising policy the Morgan Furniture Co. had added a trained interior decorator to the staff of its Malden store, for consultation without cost. In addition to the decorative advice customers may consult store officials upon budgetary problems.

Burlesque Gets Gala Start Reopening Old Howard

The burlesque season opened up with a good deal of the hooray spirit at the Old Howard yesterday afternoon. Patrons were evidently eager for the first show of the new era, and the house was filled when the "Girls from the Follies," an Empire traveling troupe began their show.

It is a good show, and is different in marked manner from old-style burlesque. There is a swing toward classier settings, for one thing; and throughout the results verify the forecast of Manager Al Somerby that the season would find burlesque better than ever.

Costumes are nifty, and the company had plenty of pep. The funsters are clever chaps, three in number, Lee Hickman, John Barry and Frank Harcourt. They kept things moving at a merry pace. Among the stars are Mlle. Verne, Elinor Walent, Evelyn Brooks, Bebe Tobin, Buster Gerard, "Bobbie" Taylor, Jean Bodene, Jimmy Gerard, and the Matt Brothers.

In the continuous part of the bill, the Carnera-Sharkey fight films pleased the sporting fans in the audience. Harry "Zoup" Welch and Company amused in a clever comedy specialty and the Three Whippets delighted in an acrobatic act.

Voice of Broadway

—By Louis Sobol—

Snapshots at Random!

At the Tavern Wednesday night . . . Morton Downey insists I feel his stomach . . . "I've lost 20 pounds," he assures me, earnestly . . . Conrad Nagel enters with Bert Lytell and stops to chat with Lenore Ulric . . . Bobby Crawford tells me he's leaving for the Coast . . . "The only place for you, Louie," he insists . . . "Broadway's dead . . . it's moved to Hollywood . . . They're laying out 42nd st. to 50th for cemetery plots." . . . Johnny Walker urges me to drop in at the Mayfair and inspect his first full-length flicker, "Mr. Broadway" and I promise him I will at some future date, but that night I must view "Berkeley Square," with Leslie Howard, at the Gaiety, which I do and find the picture very much to my liking, but what impresses me considerably is that, for a change there is none of the "glamorous" assembly of notables in the audience and that's quite a relief . . . Later at the Maison Royale, where Mary Hay sits quietly with Paul Sabin and vouchsafes me a shy and doubtful "hello" . . . Angela, the accordion player, pumps away at her music box and chants softly, "Otchi Chernya, otchi strasna" while a bull-necked, flodid-panned gent, his arm around a slim, rather good-looking gal, tries to whistle the tune, but makes a bad job of it . . .

Saturday night, I round up Pat Rooney, 3rd, Mickey Alpert and baby-faced Dorothy Fox and start to show them the town . . . At the Biarritz, the handsome Gene Marvey sings a torch song and young Rooney pilfers a nickel from Alpert to call up his wife . . . We move over to the Park ave., where we find another slice of Broadway and some Park ave. . . . The Harry Rosenthals (who expect to become parents within the fortnight) are seated with the Archie Selwyns . . . At a wall table, Playwright George S. Kaufman surveys the dancing couples . . . George White leaves as June Knight enters with Fred Waring . . . June tosses me a cold "hello," shrugs her shoulders and turns her back on me, from which I infer the lovely June no longer cares in the big, passionate way for at least one Broadway columnist . . . Mary Brown Warburton, with Maj. Barclay Warburton as her guest, is another of the wall-table sitters . . . We move on to the Simplon Club, where we enter in time to hear Frances Faye's torrid version of "Tony's Wife" . . . Two-thirds of the Ritz brothers enter, go into a huddle with Pat Rooney and Mickey Alpert and quartet goes slightly insane for a few minutes

BOOKS—And Other Things

--By Charles Hanson Towne--

Someone was speaking the other evening of an incident in a recent novel which strained the reader's credulity. "It could never have happened in real life," was the obvious remark.

Yet things happen frequently to all of us which, if used by the novelists, would never be believed.

And it is, of course. One man spoke up, and we could not doubt his story, for he is famous for his truthfulness.

* * *

He was coming out of his office building one afternoon when a face that he had not seen in twenty years was before him—a man who used to work on a certain magazine with him. Had our friend been a minute quicker or a minute later he would not have encountered this old acquaintance. He could not, for the life of him, recall his name, though he remembered the exact position he had occupied in that editorial office. He walked down the street with him, and they chatted of old times, and he hadn't the heart to inquire the man's name.

The inevitable "touch" was finally made, and Mr. A. forked out all he could afford.

* * *

That evening he went, as usual, to the rank of taxis on his corner to pick up a cab; and for once there was a strange cabman there. He got into his car. He has a habit, he says, of always looking at a taxi driver's card, committing to memory the name instead of the number, as he would surely forget the latter, in case of accident.

To his amazement the very name he had been searching for all afternoon was printed there:

JOHN SEDLEY.

He glanced at the driver, wondering if during the interval since he had seen his old acquaintance the latter had in fact obtained a job as a taxi driver. But it was not his John Sedley.

"Think," he said, "of all the taxi drivers there are in the vast city of New York, and that I should have found John Sedley. Had such a coincidence been used by a writer of fiction how I should have laughed!"

Have you ever been interrupted in something you were doing and humanly cursed the interruption? I was plodding away at one of these columns, if you will believe me, not long ago and found myself at an impasse. I could not get from one paragraph to the next and was wracking my brain for the proper continuity when the telephone jangled. My thoughts were far away and I did not hear the bell at first. Then it seemed to ring with even more insistence and, reluctantly, I answered it. A charming lady was inviting me to dine with her, and, being in a peevish mood, I was about to refuse when she said:

And she outlined what she had in mind. It fitted perfectly into what I was trying to do as perfectly as one shingle over another; and I went back to my desk and moulded her thought into my uncompleted manuscript. How I blessed that interruption, which rounded out my day's work!

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 75,000

America's Crusade for Prosperity Goes Marching On Toward Victory

ARE YOU FOLLOWING the march of the buyers? Its steady forward sweep—gaining breadth and pace and momentum with each day that passes?

You will find it told in the trade reports—ordinarily of little interest except to merchants, bankers, speculators and such like, not to the general reader who turns to subjects with more human appeal, more drama, more action.

This may be true in ordinary times—but not today. All the "drama" of our lives—at this hour—all the "action" which seems worthy of our powers, for the present, is centered in the MIGHTY MARCH OF THE BUYERS, now going on throughout the land.

* * *

A GREAT people—great of heart and mind—have decided to march out of a situation which cannot hold them in check, a situation of temporary defeat which belies their energies and qualities as a people. They are determined to abandon the swampy ground of confused purposes, misdirected powers, frustrated efforts and to leave behind them a depression, now seen to be largely artificial, and, in any rational view, as well as use, of our economic potentialities, unnecessary.

The people are buying—BUYING AMERICAN GOODS, wares and merchandise from American merchants—American products from American producers and workers, and the effects are instantly apparent from one end of the country to the other.

* * *

UNEMPLOYED workers by the million have been called back to work. The factory wheels are turning again. Wages are flowing into the tills of the storekeepers. The weekly totals of trade are rising. Shoes, clothing, provisions and up through the catalogue of consumer's needs to automobiles, electric energy and railroad transportation—it is the same blessed and reassuring story—goods in increasing movement, money in broadening circulation, percentages of reviving trade in steady climb.

It is not so much a matter of where you are in the course of a journey as what direction you are going in. Better to be at the bottom of a hill, going up, than at the top, coming down. We have not been at the bottom, by any means, but, for a long time, we've been going down. Now, we're going up; not yet so fast as we soon shall be—but unmistakably, surely and with steady acceleration—UPWARD!

THANK God for it! Praise be to the deep planted virtues of our people, who can discern duty when it beckons, and have the power within themselves of instant and united response when once they discern it. No halting, no hanging back ever marks their course from that moment on. The Buy Now movement which started this month has exceeded all predictions, all anticipations. It must not falter. It will not. The people will see to that!

HOW STIRRING A SPECTACLE IT IS—THE SELF-EVOKED ENERGIES OF A GREAT PEOPLE, THE AWAKENING SENSE OF THEIR OWN POWER—THE POWER TO TAKE A BOLD AND DECISIVE TONE IN THE ORDERING OF THEIR AFFAIRS, TO MARK THEIR OWN COURSE, TO APPLY THEIR OWN EXPEDIENTS, TO CAPTAIN THEIR OWN DELIVERANCE!

Speed it on. Sustain it. Support it.

It is your country, fellow Americans, taking the field! IT IS AMERICA ON THE MARCH!

$100,000,000 Power

One hundred million dollars worth of consuming power sits at the conference in Boston.

American Retailers, Inc., is the guest of the Gilchrist Company and of Felix Vercenbers, who has been the President of this national association of twenty-eight great department stores.

Without them, the manufacturing industries would have no outlet for their products; the consumers would have only the most elementary avenues for the purchase of the goods they need. Without them, business would be inactive, trade would stagnate, employment would be precarious.

We are glad to see them here, discussing and fashioning the policies they will pursue for economic recovery of the Nation in a city in which the Nation itself was modeled in Colonial days.

We wish them well. Their success and the success of the public as a whole are inextricably associated.

Sugar Lobby Should be Expelled From Capital

—By James T. Williams, Jr.—

If President Roosevelt had the power under the law to expel from Washington for 90 days every lobbyist that now infests the federal city, several of the problems with which the administration is now wrestling could be easily solved.

These sugar lobbyists represent one of the most powerful special interests in the United States. They are thwarting the efforts of the President to discharge American obligations and promote American welfare on several fronts.

It is the sugar lobbyists who are attempting to compel the administration to betray the Philippine people by subjecting them to a limitation on their production of sugar that would threaten the stability of their government and add to their economic distress.

It is the sugar lobbyists who are doing their best to defeat the efforts of the administration to lend a helping hand to Cuba in the form of a new reciprocity treaty that will be beneficial to the people of Cuba as well as to the people of the United States.

It is the sugar lobbyists who are jeopardizing the reciprocity negotiations of the administration with Mexico and the other republics to the south by demanding that an embargo be placed on any importation of sugar from those countries which are already required to pay a heavy import duty under existing tariff laws.

POWERFUL MINORITY

The sugar lobbyists represent the cane and beet sugar growers of continental United States and of Hawaii. This is a very small but powerful minority of investors in sugar properties which is attempting to dictate to the one hundred and twenty million people of the United States what their economic policy shall be toward the Philippine Islands, the Republic of Cuba, and the republics of Central and South America.

President Roosevelt, upon the recommendation of Secretary Hull, who is striving to negotiate new reciprocity treaties with Cuba, Mexico and the other republics to the south, has thus far refused to sanction a limitation on Cuban sugar production that would further cripple Cuba or an embargo on Latin American sugar production that would defeat reciprocity negotiations in that quarter.

President Roosevelt has thus far refused, upon the recommendation of Secretary Dern, to jeopardize the stability of the Philippine government and add to the economic chaos of the Philippine people by subjecting them to an indefensibly unfair limitation upon their sugar production.

Whether the Roosevelt administration will be able to compel the sugar lobbyists to respect the obligations of the United States by consenting to reasonable limitations on sugar production which will be acceptable to the Philippines, Cuba and Latin America is still a question.

ADJUST THE BUDGET

If the President is successful in his effort to offer the Philippine people a temporary limitation of from 1,100,000 tons of sugar to 1,200,000 tons annually, the Philippine government may be able to adjust its budget to meet this liquidation.

If the President is able to offer Cuba a tonnage approximating 2,000,000 tons of sugar to be gradually reduced to 1,800,000 tons, Secretary Hull may succeed in negotiating a new reciprocity treaty that the Cuban people will regard as fair.

But Mexico and the other Latin American republics will vigorously protest an embargo on their small sugar exportations to this country, and the imposing of this embargo would make further reciprocity negotiations with those countries utterly futile.

Fighting the sugar lobbyists is no new experience for a Roosevelt administration. One of the first official acts of Theodore Roosevelt as President was an order directing the federal government to prosecute the "sugar trust," which was the nickname then given to the American Sugar Refining Company, for "fraudulent evasions of duty in the importation of sugar."

One of Theodore Roosevelt's first acts after he left the presidency in 1909, was to tell the American people the sordid story of this gigantic steal which he did in an article published in May, 1909.

Always Dangerous Business

When the Disarmament Conference reconvenes at Geneva, all of Europe's mad attitudes and jealous rivalries will be forced to the forefront again.

Uncle Sam will be over there, in the person of his "Roving Ambassador."

From France have come reports that disarmament agreements will not be possible unless Uncle Sam becomes responsible for enforcement of Versailles Treaty "sanctions" against Hitler's Germany.

And Britain hints that our naval building program—intended to make work for our own people, and to bring us more nearly to a "treaty navy" basis and to equality with Britain herself—may hamper the conference.

Again, we see already, meddling in Europe is dangerous business for Uncle Sam.

Ridiculous Yarns

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 19—Likely many pontiffed those white-washed lawn stones that curlicue New England greenswards. Best kept front yards in the world are here. And housekeeping as an art attains its zenith. Every window is an immaculate flutter of lace curtains. Every porch a doll.

O. O. McIntyre

I was interested from whence I received as a midwest telegraph editor, fabulous versions of cows that gave cider and bull frogs that croaked high tenor. It is mainstreety, with plenty of accomplished whitders and rockers. A fine hive for ridiculous yarns.

I never thought of tobacco fields in Connecticut, but acres of them gray the valleys with their protective covering of cheese cloth. Also huge warehouses, precisely latticed and racked with tobacco. No scrubby hillside patches here, featuring a lean-to, sick cow and sour well. Mother earth is generous.

* * *

Most cities on the brink of becoming a metropolis suggest the bewildered novice suddenly thrust in stellar role. Springfield is exception—a bustling manufacturing center. One alpaca plant was blazing after midnight. No one seemed loafing and I warmed to the mind-your-own-business air.

* * *

We stopped at the Kimball, reminiscent of the old Burnett in Cincinnati. Little push button and flunkied flap doodle, but mellow hospitality. The dogs were admitted with no eyebrow lift. For years I've wanted to pay especial tribute to the most intelligent response of all in hotels here and abroad—room service. I have never in years of hotel living known them to make a mistake in meal orders. Yet these are employees the patrons never see. Or tip.

* * *

Amid the sun's sinking splendor we motored to Amherst—Dwight Morrow's college. On a beautiful upland, it's far more alluring than Yale. The campus trees, so old and gnarled, bespoke simplicity of an older mode. To go out into life feeling deeply rooted to Amherst must be comforting through the years.

* * *

Holyoke is another suburb ashine with cheery simplicity. We dined in a venerable roadside tavern, whose floorboards creak with the dignity of 148 years. The dinner, with enormous list of savory New England dishes, was 55 cents. The waitress, buxom, middle-aged, crossed the floor gingerly on tiptoe. Framed on the wall, George Washington's call for troops ending in the forlorn bravura: "God Save the United States!"

An enticingly clear night and sky powdered with stars. After dinner a drive up the winding roads of Mt. Tom. In one clearing we permitted city bred dogs to indulge a freedom they seldom enjoy—running at large unleashed. In Kasper Hauserish fashion, they displayed no interest in woodland things, merely hanging about our heels. But frisked and barked happily returning to the car.

* * *

Across the hotel court at a window rocker sat a white-haired lady. I smiled and bowed and she waved a blue veined hand, reminditul of many grandmothers whose last days' vision narrows to small horizons. My wife sent a bouquet she gathered along the roadside. When we departed she displayed it in a vase on the sill. It is difficult to interpolate into such apparent trivia the significance it deserves.

I was especially interested in Southbridge, Mass., a sprightly city along the way. From here my syndicated wares are sent in proof sheets to newspapers. The printery is part of The Southbridge News, a lively daily owned and edited by my syndicate chief, V. V. McNitt. The newspaper structures offer simpler dignity. Of red brick, perched back on a peaceful knoll, its facade is graced by snow-white colonial pillars. There was an attractive maid typewriting at a window, at whom I shouted: "I'm one of your hands!"

But I did not check in. Anything that even suggests my job has of a sudden become abhorrent. I've become a food and sleep man.

Education

I think that I would rather teach a child
The joys of kindness than long hours to spend
Poring o'er multiple and dividend;
How differing natures may be reconciled
Rather than just how cost accounts are filed;
How to live bravely to its end
Rather than how one fortress to defend
Or how gold coins once gathered can be piled.
There is an education of the mind
Which all require and parents early start,
But there is training of a nobler kind
And that's the education of the heart.
Lessons that are most difficult to give
Are faith and courage and the way to live.

Human Side of the News

Romantic and Mysterious History of Opal Whitney—Strange Meeting in India

—By Edwin C. Hill—

In the secret vault files of the state department in Washington lies buried a romantic secret. I would give something to penetrate. It must be there, that secret, for one of the greatest secretaries of state we have ever had signed his name to a certain document which had to do with the mystery. But it has gathered dust in the files, no doubt, and is apt to stay there.

Only a curious incident of just the other day revived recollection that secret there was. An American lady who was traveling in India, came to the native state of Udaipur. There she paused in her journey, for she was entranced with the shining city, violet-crowned, set like a pearl in the jade hills. Its snow-white palaces rose sheer from turquoise lakes. Up and down its streets, with free and flowing stride, went stately women in swinging skirts of orange, and sweeded Rajputs, and wild-eyed Bhils with bow on back and sheaf of arrows, and lepers begging in whining supplication, and caparisoned stallions, and sacred bulls.

And while the American lady sat entranced in her carriage half a troop of cavalry came toward her at a quick trot—lean, brown men on coal-black horses, all gay and glowing with brilliant trappings. And back of the foot-trotting horses and their splendid aura came a gleaming carriage. And in the carriage, very upright and aloof, under a silken parasol, was a raven-haired, dark-eyed, olive-skinned lady that the American traveler knew as surely as she knew her own name.

The lady in the carriage was Opal Whitney, an American girl with a curious history, who had disappeared ten years previously, and of whom little but the vaguest report had ever been heard since. Discreetly the traveler made inquiry and learned that the haughty lady in the carriage, escorted by the house cavalry of His Royal Highness the Maharana of Udaipur, the highest ranking prince in all proud Rajputana, was a dweller in the palace and a near relation of the Maharana.

And that was all the traveler could learn. But her mind flashed back through the years to the time when Ellery Sedgwick, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, sprang a literary sensation by publishing the diary of a child of nine—the diary of Opal Whitney. He printed it chapter by chapter and then brought it out in book form, to the delight even of the skeptical. For it was, for a child of nine at least, a perfectly phenomenal piece of writing in the genius of imagination, which gave to animal pets the name of gods of Olympus, and could attach to a pet lamb the staggering cognomen of Sophocles Diogenes. It was, indeed, the sensation of the literary world, this diary of nine-year-old Opal Whitney, whatever opinion finally attached to its genuineness.

And the American lady who had been amazed at the brilliant apparition in the streets of Upaipur recalled other odd things that she had read—that Opal Whiteley, after submitting at the age of 19 or so the dairy she asserted she had written at 9, had left the United States very secretly, traveling not with an ordinary passport, but with the aid of a confidential document signed by an American Secretary of State and Sir Edward Grey of England for the British Foreign Office.

And eventually the tale got about that the strange, gifted child and woman, Opal Whiteley, was actually the daughter of a scion of the noble French line of Orleans and Artois, of royal blood, and of his wife, a daughter of the Maharana of Udaipur, and that she went straight to Udaipur in India, to her grandfather's palace, and there has remained ever since.

Dr. Rushford Williams, foreign minister for His Highness the Maharajah of Patiala, also a native state of Rajputana, told this writer two years ago that a young American lady was actually residing at the Udaipur royal palace, evidently a member of the royal family. He knew her also as a brilliant contributor to London newspapers. And in this writer, also, Editor Sedgwick of the Atlantic Monthly contributed this extraordinary scrap of information regarding the mysterious Opal:

"She sent me from London a long account of her trip to India, where she has gone to follow the footsteps of her supposed father, Prince Henri d'Orleans. To substantiate her story, she sent many photographs, but wishing to place the matter beyond peradventure, I wrote to several maharajahs, and from the secretaries of at least two courts I got formal assurances of the correctness of her story.

"Opal never told me under what auspices she went, but I think beyond question that the old Orleans dowager, now dead, countenanced her. At any rate, she was everywhere accepted as an authentic princess, and I received several letters from Englishmen of position saying they had seen her at important levees, and that she had been shown signal favor in accompanying one maharajah, at least, on a tiger hunt, and with all the trappings appropriate to a visit of royalty."

So much for Mr. Ellery Sedgwick's contribution and the little else that is authentically known. Mystery it still remains, this strange tale of a child who sprang from a royal house of France and a royal house of India; who came somehow to America as an orphan and was brought up in a middle class family, and who made her way back by some sort of instinct to the land and level of her origin. The tale remains yet to be told.

Language Follows Money

A Boston educator predicts a new and universal world language, displacing the 3000 in use today.

English and Spanish are coming to the front, he observes. For "English" he might have said "American."

Language has followed money and trade, since creation.

European Nations owe Uncle Sam Eleven Thousand Millions of Dollars, for war debts alone.

Of course, they learn the language of the country where this wealth originates. Even if they do not pay the bills.
